Ottawa Seeks Uniform Controls

Phosphate Law Coming

B.C. Set to Move By End of March

By IAN STREET
Colonist Legislature Reporter

The federal government has agreed to draft pilot legislation to control the use of phosphates in laundry detergents and will ask all the provinces to adopt it as a form of uniform pollution control, B.C. Resources Minister Ray Williston said Tuesday.

The minister told the Legislature he telephoned federal Resources Minister J. J. Greene in Ottawa Tuesday morning and was told the federal government "was having trouble making a unilateral decision" on the question of controls over the use of phosphates in detergents.

* * *

(An Ottawa report Tuesday quoted Mr. Greene as saying federal authorities are powerless at present to enforce a ban or progressive reduction of phosphates used in detergents.)

But, Mr. Williston said, the federal minister agreed to his proposal that Ottawa draw up "a pilot act for controlling phosphates which can be passed by each legislature so we can have a uniform set of legislation right across Canada."

* * *

"I think that is real progress," Mr. Williston said. "I have asked Mr. Greene to please have it (the draft legislation) back here by March 15 at the latest.

"I am sure the members of this Legislature will give the necessary permission to have first, second and third reading of this proposed legislation on one day if necessary in order to approve it before the current session ends in late March."

* * *

He also told the House that he pleaded with Mr. Greene to take the initiative in drawing up legislation for the control of automobile exhaust fumes which would then be submitted to provincial legislatures for their approval. He was told Ottawa would consult with the provinces on this matter.

* * *

Earlier this week, Pollution Probe, a University of Toronto research group, reported that up to 52.5 per cent phosphate content has been found in heavy duty laundry detergents and up to 45 per cent in automatic dishwasher detergents.

The group, which blames phosphates for much of the

No Body Found

Two Face Murder Charges

LONDON (Reuters) — Two brothers were charged Tuesday night with the murder of Muriel McKay, wife of a British newspaper executive who vanished Dec. 29.

The charges were lodged at the police station in suburban Wimbledon, not far from the home of the 56-year-old Mrs. McKay, whose husband, Alexander, is deputy chairman of The News of The World, a sensationalist Sunday newspaper.

* * *

The charges followed a three-day police search for Mrs. McKay's body at an isolated farm in the countryside north of here. But police said Tuesday no body has been found.

The two accused, who had been questioned for 72 hours, were identified as the residents of the farm, Arthur Hosein, 33, and his brother, Nizamodee, 21. Both are believed natives of Trinidad.

* * *

They were also charged with demanding £1,000,000 ($2,600,000) with threats.

The alleged offences were described as taking place Dec. 29 and Feb. 6.

The accused men will appear in court today.

Mrs. McKay, a tall, green-eyed brunette, was born in Adelaide, Australia. Her husband returned home on the evening of Dec. 29 to find signs of a struggle in the house and his wife gone.

White Tide Crushes Skiers

Alpine Avalanche Kills 39

Loosened by up to 60-mile-an-hour winds of an Alpine blizzard, the mass of snow jumped a national highway, a river, crushed two garages and ripped the roof off a hotel before crashing through the doors and bay windows of the camp's dining room at breakfast time.

Survivors told of the terrible roar of the avalanche, of its dizzy speed — experts said it may have hit at nearly 120 miles an hour — and of their luck in emerging alive from the white fury.

* * *

The dining room was buried and few of the 30 or so eating there escaped alive. The walls were spattered with the blood from bodies crushed against a wall under the pressure of the slide.

Most of the dead and injured were young people enjoying a low-cost ski vacation at the Union des Centres de Plain Air (Union of Fresh Air Centres). Of the 194 guests, many were French postal and railway workers. There were about 20 Belgians and six West Germans staying at the camp's hostel.

* * *

Some bodies, including those of ski trail workers going to their jobs, were hurled high in the air. The slide's 100-yard-wide front caught cars and carried them 100 yards away.

"There was a gay happy atmosphere at the dining tables," said Jean-Charles Loos, 25, who suffered head and hip injuries. "We were talking about where we would go skiing.

"Suddenly, there was this rumbling sound. As the noise became deafening, I realized it was an avalanche. I just had time to dive against the wall for protection. Then a great wall of snow burst through the door and hit me. I was submerged and I remember no more until I woke up in a neighboring house."

Chantal Demur, 22, said she

Bill Legalizing Abortion Passes Hawaii Senate

HONOLULU (UPI) — The Hawaii senate Tuesday night voted to repeal the state's law outlawing abortions performed by physicians. The landmark bill would make Hawaii the first state in the U.S. to abolish criminal penalties for abortions performed under proper medical conditions. The senate vote was 17-7.

Next stop for the bill is the House of Representatives, where political observers say it has a "fair" chance of passage.

'Clouds' On B.C. Horizon

B.C. Resources Minister Ray Williston warned in the Legislature Tuesday there are "some clouds on the British Columbia economic horizon" and called upon labor and management in the forest industry to resolve their differences "in a realistic and responsible manner."

Failure by the industry to meet the challenge of declining markets, rising costs, and the threat of labor-management disputes, the minister said, is bound to affect government revenues to a point where it could not afford to provide all the benefits set out in the 1970 budget.

"I want to emphasize that fact," Mr. Williston said. "This is going to be one of the most serious years that we as a province will face . . ."

* * *

"Obvious areas for concern are the market for timber products at prices which allow for profitable operation. At this time our comparative direct forest revenues are on the decline.

"This relates to lumber prices which on average approximate those paid three years ago. Costs are up and prices are down."

Mr. Williston said 70 per cent of B.C.'s foreign markets for lumber are affected by U.S. anti-inflation measures which make housing capital more difficult to raise south of the border. Any decline, he added, would directly affect revenue returns to the government in the form of stumpage.

* * *

Dealing briefly with the labor situation, the minister said pending negotiations promise to be more difficult because of the market situation.

Mr. Williston also warned that the two major crown corporations—B.C. Hydro and the Pacific Great Eastern Railway — would be seriously affected by disruption in the forest industry. Both, he said, are dependent upon continuous activity in the industry to reach budget goals in the coming year.

He noted kraft pulp prices are improving together with the demand for this B.C. product in world markets. But he said it will be another year before the effects of this

Labor Willing To Talk

OTTAWA (CP) — Labor spokesman Murray Cotterill said Tuesday a major failure of the national conference on price stability was that it failed to require business to obtain advance approval for price increases. (See Page 10.)

But the steelworkers' official said that if business was serious about tying together costs and prices, labor was willing to talk.

Police Stay Off Job

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — About 150 members of the Newfoundland Constabulary voted late Tuesday to remain off their jobs until 32 suspended constables are reinstated. But one spokesman said if violence breaks out they would return to work.

Deputy assistant chief John Lawlor and an inspector also came to the meeting but met in a separate room with Tom Fralze, chairman of the police constables committee.

Arabs Hit Israelis In Munich

MUNICH (AP) — Grenade-hurling Arab commandos attacked passengers waiting to board an Israeli airliner here Tuesday and were caught up in a gun fight with Munich police.

One passenger was killed and 12 persons, including three commandos, were wounded in the incident at Munich's Reim airport.

Asaf Dayan, 24-year-old actor son of Israeli Defence Minister Moshe Dayan, was among the passengers, but he was not hurt. Friends said he was en route to London to discuss a movie contract.

* * *

Hanna Meron, one of Israel's best-known actresses, was wounded and Dayan accompanied her to a Munich hospital where she was reported in serious condition.

It was the fifth Arab guerrilla attack against El Al, Israel's national airlines, in the last 30 months.

Police identified the slain passenger as Arieh Katzenstein, 32, from Haifa. His father, Heinz, 57, was among the six passengers

New Federal Policy Ends Prison Rule—Indian MLA

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE

The federal government's new Indian policy will mean a release from 103 years of paternal care and prison-like control for Canada's native people, B.C.'s Indian MLA told the B.C. Legislature Tuesday night.

Frank Calder (NDP—Atlin) said the native Indians have for years been condemning Canada's Indian laws and that they "should consider this statement of policy a victory after their many years of protest against a dictatorial administration . . . of those damn Indian agents."

* * *

When provincial jurisdiction of Indian affairs is finally granted, Mr. Calder said, it will mean "a freedom from restraint, from military control, and a freedom from Canada's black holes of iniquities.

* * *

Mr. Calder said he is anxious to see Indians get municipal status and self-government on reserves and he said he hopes for a favorable result in the efforts of Indians at Cape Mudge on Quadra Island to gain municipal status. If they do the next area to seek municipal status may well be Mr. Calder's own Nass River Valley Indians, the Nishgas, he said.

While welcoming the change in Indian affairs Mr. Calder charged the federal government with failure to cope with market improvement are felt in the provincial economy.

The minister added: "The dependence of the pulp industry on residuals from the sawmills is now more firmly established so that a disruption of activity at any point in the timber manufacture process tends to slow production on a wide front."

Mr. Williston said the $1,166,177,415 budget presented by Premier Bennett last Friday will turn out to be the best provincial budget in Canada this year "if one considers three essentials" which he listed.

● Anti-inflationary policies needed for treatment of "a bad case of economic diarrhea which we have at the present time."

● Basic needs of the people who are caught in a price squeeze "and cannot react to better themselves."

● Problems of those seeking an education or buying a home in the current period of tight money and high interest rates.

In his 90-minute speech Mr. Williston covered a number of other topics including:

● Defence of the government's handling of the Cypress Bowl controversy. He denied opposition charges that the crown lands leased to a private developer had been dedicated as parkland in the early 1940s. And the minister said all action taken by the lands department was in conjunction with the municipality of West Vancouver which adjoins Cypress Bowl.

● Alpine Outdoor Recreation Resources Ltd., the private developer given lease to purchase agreements for 600 acres of crown land in Cypress Bowl, since ordered held in abeyance, will be given until Mayor June to come up with new partners. Mr. Williston said Benguet Consolidated Inc., with gambling interests in the Bahamas, is out of the picture finally as far as the government is concerned.

was warned by American sources that conservationists

● The minister said he was warned by American sources that conservationists in Washington State were planning to fight the Skagit River Valley flooding battle in B.C. because "they felt they couldn't win it at home." He said he didn't believe the reports until he heard the attacks by opposition members in the legislature this session.

● He said the flooding behind Ross Lake Dam in Washington, which will engulf more than 6,000 acres in B.C., "will create one of the most accessible, scenic and delightfully usable spots to be found in the Lower Mainland."

● The minister said a suggestion by William Hartley (NDP—Yale Lillooet) that nearby Hat Creek coal deposits be used to provide alternate thermal power sources was unworkable because it would not provide the peaking power that Seattle needs from the enlarged Ross Dam.

● He added that an agreement signed by the International Joint Commission in 1967 covering the flooding of the Skagit Valley protects B.C. against inflation by giving it the option of taking electrical energy instead of money in compensation — amounting to about 9¼ million KWH per annum.

wounded. The others wounded were the plane's pilot and flight engineer, a policeman and the commandos.

Police said their initial investigation indicated three Arabs made the attack but a fourth Arab seized at the airport remained in custody.

In Amman, Jordan, the Popular Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine and a smaller Palestinian Arab guerrilla group called the Action Organization for the Liberation of Palestine claimed responsibility for the attack.

The grenades exploded in an airport lounge and aboard a bus taking passengers to a plane that had stopped here on a flight from Tel Aviv to London. Some of those injured were on the bus and others were waiting in the terminal.

Hermann Schreiber, head of the Munich police department, said 19 persons were on the bus when the attack began. He said the bus was parked outside the terminal and the pilot and co-pilot were walking toward it when three or four men armed with pistols blocked their path.

Avner Idan, minister at the Israeli embassy in Bonn, said the pilot "saw one Arab pull a hand grenade from his pocket and threw himself onto the Arab."

The crew members and the attacker were injured by a grenade that exploded near them as they grappled, Idan said.

Meanwhile, the police chief said, another Arab jumped onto the bus and threatened the driver who pressed a release opening the rear door so the passengers could flee.

One Arab threw a grenade into the bus and a gunfight then broke out between the attackers and police, Schreiber said.

Young Canecutters Heading for Cuba

DETROIT (UPI) — A group of 44 young men and women who said they were going skiing headed eastward by bus Tuesday but their final destination was believed to be the sugar cane fields of Cuba, not the ski slopes of Canada.

The bus was one of about a dozen from all over the United States reportedly carrying passengers who hope to board a Cuban freighter and help in harvesting sugar cane. Several of the passengers called themselves members of the "Venceremos Brigade." The Spanish word venceremos translates to "We will conquer."

Official sources in Washington said that 216 brigade members were expected to arrive at Saint John, N.B., today, aboard a Cuban cattle boat after spending two months harvesting sugar cane in Havana province.

The group was held up Monday night at the Canadian border at Windsor when customs officials said they were "not bona fide nonimmigrants" or visitors.

Benoit Miko, 21, of Brussels said he was caught on the hostel stairway when the avalanche struck "with a frightening noise," sweeping him along a corridor and out a window.

"I found myself outside lying in the snow," he related. "My ears were still filled with the terrible sound of the avalanche. My arm was bleeding, and I wandered in a daze into a hotel opposite and asked them to bind it up."

New Indian Policy

Indian problems in the past, lacking funds for Indian affairs administration, planning to evade further constitutional responsibilities and with planning to "avoid the settlement of the Indian land claims."

He also charged the white paper was "preconceived and in preparation prior to the consultations with the native Indians in Canada."

This, he said, was one of the reasons why Indians across Canada have protested the proposals of the white paper.

But, he said, the main reason for opposition was that provincial jurisdiction was not part of the terms of reference in consultations with Indians.

Any future success in mapping government changes in Indian affairs will require continual consultation, confrontation and dialogue with Indians, he said.

Mr. Calder said that after years of condemning the Indian Act and federal Indian administration for all its flaws, "the government statement should be a cause for celebrations."

He said he looked forward to the provinces assuming jurisdiction and "I cannot understand why the native Indian people should remain under separate and stagnant laws when they can benefit from the provincial laws under which they rightfully belong just like you do."

He said native Indian youth, "the backbone of the native Indians of tomorrow is just plain fed up with the segregational, colonizational and reserve system."

Their modern needs are in the cities and they recognize the need for the switch of jurisdiction, he said.

"To put it bluntly, I advocate provincial jurisdiction because I am convinced that one day that is exactly how it is going to be, and I am not one to deny the future generation of native Indians their rightful place under the sun."

Drug Abuse Indicated If Diet Pills Misused

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Your Good Health

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My daughter tells me she and her husband are taking diet pills. Neither is more than a few pounds overweight, and they aren't on a diet. They take the pills to keep awake.

Her husband seems to be "hooked" on these pills and begs her to keep him supplied. He also urges her to take them. He is very nervous and gets angry easily.

My daughter tells me it is very easy to obtain the pills and gets all the refills she wants just by telephoning the doctor. I am worried. — Mrs. L.T.

This is a gross misuse of so-called diet pills — in fact, an example of one thing that is meant by the term "drug abuse."

While you don't specify just what kind of pills they are, they evidently contain some form of the amphetamines, known these days among drug takers as "speed."

There is no valid excuse for using them to lose a few pounds; very moderate dieting can take care of that. But when people take the pills and don't diet at all, the end result is easily predictable. Either they'll gain weight again as soon as they stop the pills, or they'll have to stay on the pills indefinitely.

And if they stay on the pills? Jitters, nervousness, and in this case perhaps the husband's bad temper are the usual result. And people do get "hooked" on amphetamines.

From the sound of things, the husband is a dependent sort of fellow; if your daughter can be led to see the light, perhaps she can get him "unhooked." And herself, too, perhaps?

I've never had much confidence in these drugs for reducing anyway; they have some value, if properly used on a short-term basis, just to tient that physiologically he tient that physiologically het can lose weight, and that the proper way is to learn to eat a little less than he has been eating, and exercise more.

★ ★ ★

A conscientious physician will see to it that the patient does not use the drugs long enough to become "hooked." Unhappily, we have heard of too many cases in which refills have been granted rather casually — not to mention cases of patients going to more than one doctor and getting more pills than either doctor knew.

CFL Clubs Pick Players Today

TORONTO (CP) — Quarterback Wayne Holm, a senior from Simon Fraser University, is expected to be a prime target today in the Canadian Football League's 1970 draft of 243 eligible Canadian college players.

But Rogers Lehew, general manager of Calgary Stampeders, who own the first choice compliments of an earlier deal with Winnipeg Blue Bombers, Tuesday was not anxious to claim the B.C. youth.

LINESMEN NEEDED

"I don't know if we'll draft Holm or not," Lehew said. "We need Canadian linemen."

Earl Lunsford, Winnipeg general manager, said he was not disappointed at losing the chance to draft Holm. "I don't think we could have afforded to play him (Holm) even as a backup. He lacks experience," Lunsford said.

COMPLETES DEALS

The Blue Bombers, who had the first draft pick after finishing last in the Western Conference in 1969, gave it to Calgary in exchange for the rights to defensive tackle Doug Walker of Queen's University. Winnipeg will choose seventh in the first round, first and fifth in the second round. The seventh pick completes last season's Dave Raimey deal with Toronto Argonauts of the Eastern Conference and the fifth pick in the second round stems from a deal with the EFC's Hamilton Tiger-Cats.

EXPECTS VALUE

Despite his lack of interest in Holm, and the preference of his colleagues for U.S. college-trained Canadian youths, Lunsford expects full value from the Canadian draft for his Blue Bombers.

"About half our Canadian strength last season was from draft choices," Lunsford said. "We had two number one picks last year and both made our team.

"Doug Strong, a defensive halfback from Waterloo Lutheran, was our first choice," Lunsford said. "We also had Montreal's first pick and we took Rob McLaren, a linebacker from Simon Fraser. He played the last eight games for us."

WILL BE ACTIVE

The Winnipeg manager said he intends to be active in the draft for at least three rounds.

Separate conference meetings are scheduled for today along with the draft proceedings.

Post Strike Violence Flares

MONTREAL (CP) — Violence flared up Tuesday night as roaming groups supporting striking mail truck drivers smashed two trucks near the city's main post office building, injuring one driver.

The latest outburst brings to six the number of trucks damaged since Feb. 3 when irate mail truck drivers began a rotating strike to protest expected layoffs March 31.

Market Cost May Be High

Wilson Says U.K. Entry Depends on Talks

LONDON (UPI) — Prime Minister Harold Wilson's government told Britons Tuesday the bill for joining the European Common Market may reach $2.64 billion a year.

In an official white paper it warned food prices could jump 18-26 per cent—in line with higher European food costs—and the cost of living may jump four to five per cent over a period of years.

But Wilson told the House of Commons everything will depend on the talks Britain expects to open next summer with the six Common Market nations—France, West Germany, Italy, Belgium, Netherlands and Luxembourg.

He said if the price is too high and the terms not good enough, Britain will stay out.

"Should the negotiations not lead to acceptable terms of entry," Wilson said, "Britain is and will be strong enough to stand on her own feet outside."

All three main British political parties officially support joining the booming six-nation market, from which Britain was barred by two vetoes by former French president Charles de Gaulle in 1963 and 1967.

But all are split on this issue, with powerful minorities opposing entry.

Wilson told opponents of joining that they can voice their objections when Parliament debates the white paper in two weeks. In any case, he said, Parliament will not have to make a final decision until after negotiations show whether the terms for joining are acceptable to Britain.

'Stateless' Girl Rests —For Now—In Britain

LONDON (AP) — Ranjan Vaid finally came to Britain on Tuesday, seven days, 19,000 miles and two intercontinental trips after she began an aerial odyssey from Kenya to join her brother here.

Reluctantly bowing to public pressure, Home Secretary James Callaghan granted the 22-year-old Asian girl a three-month permit to live in Britain.

The sari-clad Indian girl left Kenya without a permit to enter Britain as many other Kenyans have been doing.

She was refused entry into Britain last week. Since then she had been shuttled from Nairobi, Kenya, which refused to let her return, to Frankfurt, West Germany; Zurich, Switzerland, and Johannesburg, South Africa.

She is a British citizen and carries a British passport but she was denied entrance to Britain under the rigid quota immigration system for British Asians and Africans.

But, where others have been rigidly refused entry, Miss Vaid captured public sympathy and crashed through — temporarily.

"I cannot promise to make it easy for those who want to jump the queue," Callaghan told the House of Commons as Miss Vaid and her brother, Shantilal, 38, were flying in from Frankfurt.

Nerve Gas Alert Set

Four Japanese Sailors Lost

Smiling Captain Sank with Ship

YOKOHAMA, Japan (UPI) — Captain Hiroshi Sumimura of the Japanese ore carrier Glifornia Maru stuck steadfastly to his post and, in the ancient tradition of the sea, went down with his ship when it sank Tuesday in high seas off the coast of Japan. Rescued crewmen said he smiled as the vessel disappeared beneath the swirling waters.

Four of the 28 sailors aboard the doomed ship also drowned when their lifeboat overturned and three other persons were lost when a plane hired by a television station to cover the sinking of the ship ditched at sea.

The rescued seamen said their captain, 44, waved at them in a parting gesture after he saw they were safely aboard the rescue vessel, the New Zealand freighter Aoteraroa, according to reports received by the Maritime Safety Agency. When they shouted at him to leave the sinking carrier, he smiled and slowly disappeared beneath the sea.

Truck Crash Spills Bombs

SANTA ROSA, N.M. (UPI) — A truck loaded with 22 crates of bombs crashed off a highway Tuesday, spilling the explosives and creating a "hazardous situation."

A four-man army demolition team from Ft. Bliss near El Paso, Tex., was flown to the scene to deactivate the class A bombs, the most sensitive type, a military spokesman said.

Nixon Signs Big Aid Bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon signed into law a $1.8 billion foreign aid appropriations bill delayed for months by congressional controversy.

It provides just under $1.5 billion for economic assistance and $350,000,000 for military aid for the current fiscal year, which ends June 30.

Cars First

Nixon Launches Tough War On Dirty Air

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — President Nixon has unveiled a tough program to rid the United States of dirty air and promised federal aid in developing an automobile which would emit virtually-clean fumes.

The president's multi-billion-dollar attack on all forms of pollution singled out the automobile as the worst befouler of the atmosphere.

In a special message to Congress Tuesday, Nixon said the department of health, education and welfare will set new, stringent emission standards for cars to come into effect in 1973 and 1975.

CAR TESTS

He also called for cars to be tested for pollution emissions throughout the year, and suggested legislation authorizing the government to regulate fuel composition and additives which pollute the air.

In the event present automobile engines cannot be made virtually pollution free, Nixon said he is ordering federal research into producing such an engine within five years.

To spur on Detroit, the president directed the government to purchase privately-produced unconventional vehicles for testing and evaluation.

TREATMENT PLANTS

The presidential message also called on Congress to adopt a capital investment program of about $10,000,000,000 in the next five years to construct waste-treatment plants and sewer lines.

Washington would provide about $4,000,000,000 for this project and the rest would come from construction bonds issued by local communities, he said.

"The rescue of our natural habitat as a place habitable and hospitable to man" is the goal of his program, Nixon said.

CONTROL VITAL

In detailing the proposed federal attacks against municipal, industrial and agricultural wastes, Nixon said all three must be controlled if lakes and rivers are to be made pure.

He called for regulations and research directed at two major goals: Making products more easily disposable and reusing and recycling more waste materials.

Guerrillas Restrained By Hussein

From UPI

Israeli jets blasted Egyptian military positions in the southern stretches of the Suez Canal for nearly two hours Tuesday. On the ground Israelis fought Arab forces in gunbattles across the canal in the west and the Jordan valley in the east.

In Jordan, Arab guerrilla organizations called an alert Tuesday night following the issue of a strict security clampdown on their activities by King Hussein's government.

A series of decrees announced after a cabinet meeting presided over by the Jordanian king banned the carrying, firing and storage of arms, demonstrations, party activities and unauthorized publications.

PARIS (LAT) — France moved to bolster still further its role as a Mediterranean arms supplier when Spain signed an agreement to purchase 30 Mirage 3 jet fighter-bombers at an estimated cost of $90,000,000.

Sea Time The Hard Way

LONG BEACH, Calif. — Navy recruit Mark Robbins, 20, fell unnoticed from his ship into the Pacific and floated three hours without a life jacket before being rescued, tired but unhurt.

He kept afloat by treading water and catching an air bubble in his hat and holding it under water.

Big Powers Are Little Help

FOR A TIME THERE WAS a panicky atmosphere in European capitals when the Soviet Union warned, at the beginning of February, that the situation in the Middle East had reached a most critical stage, giving rise to the belief that Russia might be planning direct intervention against Israel. But Western governments kept their balance of judgment, holding that the men in the Kremlin were not so mad as to take a step which would inevitably lead to confrontation with the democratic alliance.

Nevertheless, Moscow was undoubtedly seriously perturbed when it warned of the deteriorating conditions and blamed Israel's highly effective raids by air and mechanized commando for the increasing danger of escalation of what, in fact, already amounts to a mini-war.

However, the Soviet Union should not be accused of threat on this occasion. The message to the Western powers was more in the nature of a caution: that the humiliation which the Israelis have been inflicting on the Arabs for some time has become important as a political factor, and that the Russians themselves are feeling its effects.

The Russians, in effect, are giving notice that they may be compelled to yield to Arab demands for more arms—and more sophisticated arms at that—if the Israeli attacks continue.

The fact that the aggressiveness of the Israelis is a response to Arab guerrilla harassment and, to a much lesser extent, to Egyptian commando raids, is not included in the Russian assessment of the situation. Neither is it taken into account that Egypt alone among the Arab states has received from the Soviet Union and other Communist bloc nations arms valued at nearly $9 billion since the end of the six-day war in 1967.

Unhappily, there is small prospect of any agreement to an arms embargo by the supplying powers. Great Britain tried by example in 1967 to persuade other involved parties to call a halt by unilaterally declaring suspension of all arms exports to the Middle East. It had no impact whatsoever.

It is questionable, too, whether President Nixon's warning that his government would provide weapons in response to any acceleration of Soviet shipments will deter the Russians.

Such a warning, however, coupled with the almost-certainty of full-scale war if the nations engage in a race to give advantage to their favorites, may cause the Kremlin to hesitate. And any delay will allow for continued negotiation, where there is always hope that some acceptable formula can be found.

Meanwhile, it is surprising that the United Nations' Secretary-General U Thant has not taken the initiative and put Dr. Gunnar Jarring back on the job; for at this point it is just possible his mediation might be welcomed by both sides—particularly if the great powers keep their distance to avoid upsetting what would certainly be very fragile exchanges.

It is a matter of record that the intervention from both East and West has only added to the confusion and that self-interest has added vastly to the potential destructiveness of battle. It is a pity there is not some authority big enough and brave enough to tell the rival powers to keep out of it.

"Oh goody . . . !"

The Legislators' Remuneration

IN VICTORIA and in Ottawa things are looking good for legislators, money-wise; particularly in Victoria, where a 25-per-cent increase in indemnities is part of the sessional program. In Ottawa, higher pay is more at the gleam-in-the-eyes stage. But it's coming — of that there can be no doubt. The questions are how much and how soon.

In both assemblies, the dissenters appear to be few. The veteran New Democrat Stanley Knowles has been alone in arguing in Ottawa that to seek more money at a time like this would be utterly unconscionable. In Victoria it is Liberal leader Pat McGeer who thinks it is inappropriate for MLAs to take more while calling on everyone else to hold the line. The NDP Opposition leader, David Barrett, reasons that a 25-per-cent increase, the first in five years, works out at 5 per cent a year, well within a 7-per-cent guideline.

In Ottawa, the last increase was in 1963. It may be said therefore that the MPs are entitled to something like 35 or 40 per cent more. But the public outcry when they raised their indemnification from $12,000 to $18,000 in 1963 still has not entirely died down, seven years later. They set an example that is considered by many to be a seed of our present inflation.

Whatever the outcome in either capital, there is an obvious need of a better system of protecting the legislators' remuneration from the shrinkage of the dollar. It has been suggested in Ottawa that the MPs' pay should be pegged to public service salaries, possibly at the level of an assistant deputy minister. Because the provincial members have time to make much of their living in private endeavors, a similar level could not be proposed for them. But either this system or a progressive percentage per year — fit to serve as a good example for others — would be far more acceptable to the public.

Of this, however, the MPs and MLAs may be sure: even at the rate of 5 per cent a year, whether annually or at extended intervals, the pay increases they vote themselves will still serve to emphasize the plight of those whose small incomes do not keep pace. Automatic they may become, but they will hardly go unnoticed.

Heat Goes Out of Auditor's Report

By RICHARD JACKSON, Colonist Ottawa Bureau

IT was just about this time of year back in 1968 that Auditor General Maxwell Henderson blew the whistle on CBC.

Maxwell Henderson is Parliament's private "policeman," assigned to preserve and protect the federal Treasury from raids by big spenders, wasters and assorted specialists in the fine government art of extravagant expenditure.

The theory is that when "Policeman" Henderson catches the rascals in these Treasury raids he alerts Parliament to their depredations by writing them up in his Auditor General's Report.

This, traditionally, as long as anyone around here can remember, was one of the most respected, even feared documents ever to appear on Parliament Hill.

Civil servants in both high places and low would await its annual publication in fear and trembling that their names might appear in the dreaded "AG's Report," as it was known.

But not any more. Instead of the badge of dishonor it used to be to make the "Report," it seems to have become kind of campy, the chummy "in-thing" to have your name listed.

And since nothing much ever happens about it these days, there being no public spanking nor seldom any other form of punishment, everyone who is anyone in official circles enjoys a good giggle over how cleverly inventive you are in coming up with such interesting new ways of wasting public funds.

It was altogether fitting that Maxwell Henderson should blow his policeman's whistle on the CBC, for before he became auditor general he was a big wheel in the publicly-owned broadcasting corporation.

So, actually, who could know more about the wasteful ways of "Mother CBC?"

Look what the CBC has done now, he cried in alarm back in early '68, block-booked hundreds of Montreal hotel and motel rooms at a wasted cost of thousands of dollars, never occupying much of this accommodation.

All these rooms were booked in advance by CBC for its staff covering Expo. The bill ran a total $351,000 for the seven months of the big Centennial show.

Remember how difficult often impossible it was for Joe Taxpayer to find a hotel or motel room at Montreal or sometimes within 100 miles of Expo?

But not for the CBC. They had so much space they didn't know what to do with it except leave it vacant.

Of the $351,000 spent, whistled "policeman" Henderson at that time, $166,900 was wasted on rooms the CBC never used.

Well, all this was made known then by Maxwell Henderson, reported to Parliament in his annual auditor general's accounting and "referred," as they put it in these political parts, to the Commons public accounts committee.

Beyond that, nothing happened about those empty rooms and that wasted $166,900.

Came 1969 and again Maxwell Henderson blew his whistle on CBC, repeating — just in case Parliament hadn't heard him the first time around — the same story.

Now, suddenly and finally, after two years, there is CBC President George Davidson on the carpet before the public accounts committee.

Could it be true, the committee asked him, what the auditor general said about those empty rooms and that $166,900 down the drain?

Alas, yes, confessed President Davidson.

How come, asked the committee?

Well, it was this way, explained the CBC boss, they had become "panicky" — months before Expo opened — about the still theoretical shortage of hotel and motel space in and around Montreal and "over-estimated" their requirements, grossly "over-booking" accommodation they would never need.

In one hotel, 24 per cent of CBC room bookings went vacant, at a second the vacancy rate ran 41 per cent, and at the third, 50 per cent.

Then, admitted President Davidson, there was the business of "booking out" of a motel, found by the staff to be so "shoddy in extreme," that no self-respecting CBC hand would stay there. It took a month's rent — $18,900 — to cancel that booking.

But what, President Davidson seemed to pout, was all the fuss about? Wasn't every federal government agency guilty of the same wasteful Expo hotel caper?

Maybe yes, maybe no — Maxwell Henderson has yet to blow his whistle on them.

But if it takes Parliament all of two years to get around to investigating, who's afraid of the big bad auditor general? The heat goes off anything in that cooling space of time.

So who's the AG scaring or the committee kidding?

Nigeria

A Determination to Survive

By JOHN DE ST. JORRE from Lagos

THE confused and panic-stricken aftermath of the collapse of Biafra is over. While the relief operation is far from perfect the most critical and dangerous stage is past: there are no "missing millions," no starving hundreds of thousands "on the point of death" and no "reign of terror."

Even the shrillest members of the former Biafran lobby now appear to have accepted this but controversy still rages about the degree of suffering in the enclave and whether enough is being done about it. The medical side, once the most pressing problem, has become less acute as medical teams, drugs and mobile hospitals have been moved into the area.

Feeding is still the great uncertainty. However, all the most recent first-hand reports no longer suggest that it is literally a matter of life and death, though there is still suffering, especially since relief food distribution remains erratic.

The initial alarm about mass starvation seems to have been caused by an imprecise understanding of the situation in the enclave before the collapse. In the refugee camps, hospitals, and in rural districts which had been swept by the war there was serious starvation. There, and only there, people were in danger of dying if food supplies became irregular. These were the categories that depended so heavily on the mercy airlift into the secessionist territory and the efficient distribution network run by missionaries and relief workers on the ground.

The sudden end of the war changed the pattern entirely. Food supplies for this critical minority—and I am convinced from what I saw in the enclave that it was a small minority—became erratic or non-existent and many people, particularly the young, old and sick in hospitals and camps died during the first few days. But peace also helped in many ways clearly not appreciated by those who only saw the situation from inside Biafra during hostilities. Refugees were at last able to go home and they poured out in a torrent.

Their exodus immediately lifted the burden on the villagers within the enclave. The refugees themselves—often helped by army transport—invariably returned to villages outside the enclave where food was relatively plentiful and where the African extended family system could often take better care of them than any relief organization. Also, the fact that the war had stopped, that the Federal troops, contrary to all their expectations, had killed no one and that after two and a half years people were free to move and live as they liked had an immense psychological effect on the population. It gave everyone a new determination to survive—an important factor among a debilitated and bewildered rural peasantry.

The majority of the three and a half million or so in the Biafran bastion—the residents of the Ibo heartland—were not so badly off. The war had never really touched their homes, farms and villages. A visitor who recently passed through Nnewi—home town of Biafra's leader, General Ojukwu—Orlu and Ihiala was astonished at the number of chickens and goats running around. The Biafran "land army" program of intensive cultivation boosted local food supplies and a large amount of food and goods was smuggled through the lines in the latter stages of the war.

The majority of the people were—and remain—relatively hungry in contrast with the Biafran elite, who not only clearly had enough to eat but also lived in relative comfort. The mass of the rural population can be said to be suffering to some extent from starvation but it is not the acute form which means the afflicted are on the point of death (doctors call it "suppressed" starvation—the sort of debilitating continuous undernourishment many prisoners of war experienced during the last world war).

The new phase under way is known locally as the "three Rs": relief, rehabilitation and reconstruction. The relief operation continues to build-up, the massive British and American airlifts of vehicles are finished and most of the trucks are in the enclave. Hospitals at Enugu, Port Harcourt and within the war areas have received emergency staff and supplies and although co-ordination in the field is poor the Nigerians have in general made good their claim that they have the situation under control.

The administrative vacuum is slowly being filled by the new state government in Enugu under the administrator, Mr. Tony Asika. Top civil servants, doctors, engineers and police have been appointed and given advances of salaries. In the field, the army remains in control but many units have been withdrawn and the police are taking over things like roadblocks.

The other crucial vacuum is the economy. Companies with factories, stores and other interests have already sent their representatives in but the lack of electric power and Nigerian currency is preventing industry and commerce from returning to normal. The power problem is caused by the severe damage done to the Afam power station, 40 miles northeast of Port Harcourt, during the war. Virtually the whole of the former Eastern Region depended on this source of energy and although local generators can be used, the larger factories in the area, which employ a great deal of labor cannot function properly until Afam is repaired. This, according to latest estimates, may take two to three months.

The currency situation remains unchanged. Biafran notes are almost worthless and although Nigerian money is trickling in through traders, the army, and civil servants employed in Enugu, the average person is penniless. But before the government can exchange notes it must establish how much Biafran currency was in circulation. Bank records found in Orlu are now being studied but a survey of the distribution of the notes within the enclave may have to be done before an exchange can take place. Both tasks will take time and it is this factor more than any other now which is retarding a return to what the Nigerians are fond of calling "normalcy".

Not All Successful

Edison's Labor-Savers

UNITED STATES space expert Wernher von Braun likes to tell the story of the little old lady who thought that if Thomas Edison hadn't invented the light bulb, we would all be watching television by candlelight.

This absurd thought, says Mr. von Braun, illustrates in a humorous way the failure of many people to understand the blood relationships of all electric and electronic developments.

The Canadian electrical industry is taking the occasion of the 123rd anniversary today of Thomas Alva Edison's birth to hold luncheons and shows across Canada.

The aim is to remind people of the origins of our electric services, how they grew and how dependent our welfare is on their future development.

Edison spent some of his less-glorious youthful years in Canada, and even managed to make an electrical discovery here.

More of Edison's work would have been done in Canada if his father hadn't had the misfortune to support William Lyon Mackenzie in his abortive rebellion of December, 1837, and been forced to flee to the United States.

★ ★ ★

Sixteen years later, after being dismissed for accidently starting a fire on a railway car running between Detroit and Port Huron, Mich., Edison drifted into Stratford, Ont., as a tramp telegraph operator.

Being slightly lazy by nature, he tried to invent labor-saving gadgets.

To show they were alert and on the job, telegraph operators in those days were required to send the number "6," six dots every hour on the hour after 9 p.m.

To allow himself a longer snooze in slack periods, Edison rigged a device to the hands of the clock to tap out the six dots every hour.

The rig worked fine until the night an operator down the line wanted to talk with Edison when he was fast asleep in a chair.

His next job was at Sarnia, Ont., but only lasted until he failed to stop a freight train on a collision course with another down the line. Fortunately, the engineers were able to stop their trains with the cow catchers almost touching. Edison was summoned to Toronto and sacked for neglect of duty.

During the interview with his superior, he managed to duck out the door, hitch a ride with a friendly conductor back to Sarnia, and slip across the border to Port Huron in what had by that time become almost a family tradition.

Twenty years after flitting so unceremoniously across the border, Edison returned with considerably more honor to install a generator in the weaving shed of the Canada Cotton Co. at Cornwall, Ont. It gave Canada its first industrial lighting plant in 1883.

The same year, Edison installed a generating plant in the offices of a Canadian newspaper for exhibition purposes. Another was installed in the Montreal Cotton Co. mill at Valleyfield, Que.

The Edison General Electric Co. opened a sales office in Toronto in 1890 before the company sold out to a firm which later merged with the Canadian General Electric Co., in 1892.

When Edison died in 1931, the suggestion was made that all electric power in North America be turned off for one minute the day of his funeral as a tribute to his genius.

The idea was not carried through because by that time Edison's 1,300 patented inventions had so permeated all areas of the economy that the continent would have been completely crippled by even 60 seconds of lost power.

By the year 2000, we will be travelling from our electrically-run homes to our electrically-run offices in electrically-run cars.

Television sets will be able to pick up 70 channels fed by coaxial cable, and students will have their own TV-equipped booths in the classroom.

Anti-Pollution Crusaders Using Self-Defeating Tactics

By ROBERT THEOBALD

The single thing more dangerous to man than environmental pollution could well be the growing clamor over this very issue.

As recently as a year ago, concern about pollution was confined to a small, intense group. But in this past year the issue has billowed like smoke from an industrial chimney to the point that most people have come into contact with it — just as they have come into contact with filthy air.

Vociferous arguments for prevention of pollution and preservation of the environment are becoming essentials for any aspiring politician or intellectual in good standing, as witness these developments in the United States:

● The Republicans and Democrats are vying for the right to claim ownership of the issue in the 1970 congressional elections.

● Attention on college campuses is moving away from the Vietnam war to pollution. (Enthusiasm is high over a series of teach-ins planned for the spring.)

● Newspapers across the country have entered the battle.

At first sight, such developments appear completely valuable. Man's health, production and very survival depend upon pure air and pure water, both of which are threatened.

Unfortunately, if allowed to run it's present course, the movement will rapidly become divisive. Once the rhetoric of anti-pollution is translated into specific measures there will be profound opposition — because of justified divergencies between priorities and the pressures of special interest groups.

Many of those who are most concerned about the environment would agree that division on this issue is inevitable. They see the pollution problem as caused by selfish industrialists, landowners etc., whose actions can only be controlled by aroused public opinion.

The April college teach-ins are designed to create the sort of pressure which industries, cities and states cannot ignore. They are designed to force changes in priorities and spending in order to reduce pollution.

Those who are most honest admit that the direction of the pressures will often be ill-advised. However, most of those promoting the teach-ins see the crisis as so threatening and imminent that they are prepared to risk mistakes.

This risk — magnified by the intensity of an effort to change what is, after all, the established social order — could be costly. There is a strong reactionary movement in the United States today and its influence could only be increased if ecologists and conservationists interpreted public concern as providing them with a mandate to interrupt the operation of industries and services polluting the environment.

In addition, the problem is far more complex than the present rhetoric admits. All too often pollution is simplistically associated with technology — it is assumed that the way to get rid of pollution is to get rid of technology.

This is totally unrealistic: continuation of this approach can all too easily create a neo-Luddite revolt. Just as Britons smashed machines in the early 19th century to avoid progress, so Americans may try to turn off their technology, thereby creating actual chaos to avoid potential disaster. Such radical actions might well rob us of our final chance to tame a monster we have created.

The greatest problem in avoiding radical overreaction is that we have hardly begun to examine realistically the implications of the ecological crisis — and as the hysteria mounts it seems even less likely that we shall do so. Today we are only able to say that our present economic, social and political institutions are unequal to the task of repairing the environment.

Ecologists are planning to use old-fashioned divisive political techniques to achieve their goals. This divisiveness will not only hold back the realization of the most urgently required reforms but will also make it impossible to teach the deeper lesson inherent in ecological thinking.

Republican Democratic Candidate for President?

Kennedys Court Lindsay

By BILL HENRY, from Washington

The hottest topic at Washington cocktail parties concerns the next Democratic candidate for president.

The feeling is growing that as the Democrats look over their available candidates they are becoming convinced that they are fresh out of likely winners and are persuaded that their most likely candidate is, of all people, a Republican— Mayor John Lindsay of New York.

Improbable as this may sound, there's a good deal of political logic behind it.

Lindsay is a glamour boy. He appeals to labor and to the ethnic groups who largely make up the Democratic voting blocks in the big cities.

He isn't really a Republican. In Congress he voted with the liberal bloc most of the time and in the last New York mayorality election, he was repudiated by the Republicans and won as an independent.

As for the Democrats, the 1968 presidential election was a shocker. It wasn't so much that they lost. The result was very close. But they were left with poor prospects for 1972 — except for the last of the "royal family," Edward Kennedy.

Humphrey had lacked something. Muskie had made the best showing of all but lacked real political sex appeal. Sen. McCarthy had proved uncertain and unreliable. Sen. McGovern was lacking in political appeal. The situation had settled down to Teddy Kennedy or nobody.

★ ★ ★

Kennedy helped matters somewhat. He began to show signs of real aggressiveness which had been lacking previously. He challenged the formidable Senate whip Russell Long and beat him. He took the lead in several important Senate projects and did well.

He had inherited the family glamour and the blind support of the large group which believed a Kennedy could do no wrong. He had the makings of a red hot candidate.

And then came the tragedy of Chappaquiddick.

Lindsay

Lindsay by the Republicans and his victory on a liberal ticket took the curse off the fact that he had originally been elected mayor as a Republican and was still a registered member of that party.

The ruggedly handsome Lindsay's appeal to undiscriminating New Yorkers was obvious. They claim they were less interested in whether or not he was doing a good job than how he looked doing it — and, like Jack Kennedy, he looked good.

Teddy Kennedy had to be shelved for a few years in the hope that time would erase the memory of Chappaquiddick, but their family support was needed and in the past few weeks Stewart Udall, a close Kennedy supporter, has had a two-hour conference with Lindsay.

Udall may or may not have been a Kennedy emissary but there can be no question about the importance of the earlier visit of Kennedy brother-in-law Stephen Smith to the New York mayor.

Smith has had a large part in managing all the Kennedy campaigns, and, furthermore he controls the family purse strings. He is regarded as the brains of the Kennedys.

★ ★ ★

His visit to Lindsay is interpreted as putting the stamp of Kennedy acceptance on Lindsay. So don't be surprised if Lindsay turns up next time as a Democrat.

Politics make strange bedfellows and the hard pressed Democrats seem to be pulling back the bedclothes to make room for the attractive Lindsay. Stranger things have happened.

Pretoria 'Protects' Black Ally

South Africa Wins Lesotho

Jonathan

By PATRICK BEST, from Maseru, Lesotho

"I don't believe in the policy of nonalignment. A nation should be in one camp or the other," says Lesotho's prime minister, Chief Leabua Jonathan, who has brought a political crisis to his small, mountainous country to prevent an election defeat.

In an interview during the election campaign, Chief Johathan said, "I am scared of the Communists"—a view shared by the white government in neighboring South Africa, a close ally of Lesotho since the former British dependency, then Basutoland, became independent in 1966. The chief's arrested opponent, Ntsu Mokhehle, leader of the Basutoland Congress Party strengthened this fear when he received a warm welcome in Peking last year.

When the returns in the first post-independence elections last month indicated that the BCP might just pull off victory over the ruling Basotho National Party, the prime minister suspended the constitution, arrested Mokhehle and declared the election invalid. He completed his action by officially placing 32-year-old King Moshoeshoe II under house arrest.

Chief Jonathan said that he was "not ashamed" of seizing power in this way, and claimed that his move was "legal under the circumstances." He accused the opposition leader of "intimidation, violence and ballot-rigging at the polls."

There is little doubt that Jonathan was prepared for such an eventuality, even though he had predicted at the outset of the campaign that his party would win "every single seat." The Basutoland Congress Party had posed a major threat in the 1965 general elections, winning 23 of the 60 seats in parliament.

Chief Jonathan, 55, knows that he can count now on South Africa to help him shore up his present shaky position, thus making Lesotho more dependent than ever on the Pretoria government.

★ ★ ★

He confirmed in the interview that South Africa makes a substantial contribution toward the upkeep of the much-discussed Police Mobile Unit, a section of the Lesotho mounted police, which is the nearest thing to an army that this young country has. During the election campaign there were repeated reports that this unit was busy scouring the hills for "Communist sympathizers."

To describe Lesotho's current problems as a "constitutional crisis" is to ignore the weakened condition of the monarchy.

The young king has been a figurehead since independence, and over the past two years has been under virtual house arrest. Chief Jonathan again clipped the king's wings at the height of the post-election tension on the grounds that he had "technically abdicated" his throne by going back on an agreement not to be involved in party politics.

Britain still provides 50 per cent of Lesotho's budget and almost 100 per cent of the capital assistance going to this backward nation. About one-quarter of the 2,000 whites living in Lesotho today are British citizens.

But Chief Jonathan cannot expect too much help from Britain in his attempts to win sympathy for the Basotho National Party in the current political crisis. London has announced that it will not recognize Chief Jonathan's government.

But as long as Chief Jonathan can draw on South Africa's police and other resources—and there does not seem to be any chance of a cut-off here—he will probably be able to cling to power.

'Over-Paid' Doctors Criticized

Co-op Health MLA Solution

Creation of co-operative community preventative health clinics in Canada would save Canadians $350,000,000 a year and put an end to over-paid doctors who jealously hoard hospital beds, says William Hartley (NDP—Yale-Lillooet).

Speaking in the budget debate in the Legislature Tuesday, Mr. Hartley said experimental community clinics have reduced the need for hospital treatment by as much as one third.

The $138,862,146 allocated to B.C. Hospital Insurance Service would be reduced to about $43,000,000, "and that is an absolutely fantastic saving," Mr. Hartley said.

The fee-for-service method of paying doctors now in operation in this province is the biggest single contributor to rising medical and hospital costs, he said.

He said the fee-for-service system of payment is one "the American Medical Association insists Canadian doctors use," and it encourages doctors to perform services they are not qualified to perform.

One problem, he said, is the "terrific professional jealousy" of doctors who are forced into competition by the present medical care system.

It has pushed doctors to boast that they have more hospital beds available for their use than their competition.

COST FACTOR

Mr. Hartley said that the B.C. Medical Association had "failed to discipline" doctors who overcharge for services and some doctors are making as much as $200,000 a year.

B.C. should start correcting the situation by reducing the number of medical insurance carriers from nine to one, and issuing monthly statements to medical-care recipients so they can check accuracy of their billing instead of using them for "Big Daddy political gimmicks" to show how much is being paid by insurance.

BILLING PATTERN

A billing pattern committee should be formed to cut back on the "35 per cent" of doctors who now overcharge for services, Mr. Hartley said.

There should also be a committee to watch over the "quality of medical care." It would be composed of laymen as well as doctors, "not to embarrass anyone," but to improve the quality of preventative health care.

Mr. Hartley also suggested the elimination of premiums which are themselves costly to administer. Payment should be through direct taxation based on "ability to pay."

Sewage Priorities Higher Than Pools

Municipalities that build arenas and swimming pools and say they can't afford sewage treatment plants have their priorities mixed up, Alex Fraser (SC—Cariboo) said Tuesday in the Legislature.

In his maiden speech to the B.C. House, Mr. Fraser, who was mayor of Quesnel for 20 years before retiring at the end of last year, said municipalities "desperately" need funds for sewage treatment plants "to catch up with the pollution of our water."

He said he does not agree with the Pollution Control Board directive that all communities must have primary treatment plants by 1975.

SECONDARY PLANTS

"They should insist on nothing less than secondary treatment plants," the MLA said.

"While this will cost more, I am convinced the people of this province are prepared to pay for it, and if the councils do not install at least secondary treatment plants, they will not be members of council for very long.

"While the municipalities are saying they cannot afford treatment plants, some of them are building indoor swimming pools and arenas.

"... I say to these communities that they have their priorities mixed up and they had better get them straightened out," Mr. Fraser said.

Mr. Fraser also suggested that the provincial tax on gasoline should be increased from 13 cents to 15 cents to increase B.C.'s road-building program.

This could provide between "$8,000,000 and $10,000,000 in increased revenue," he said. "After all ... we now have the lowest gas tax in Canada, and by increasing it two cents per gallon we would still have the lowest gas tax in Canada."

The new MLA also suggested that government offices all over B.C. should stay open during lunch hours like all other businesses, instead of closing between 12 noon and 1:10 p.m., which is the only time most people can use government offices.

Island Gasoline Tax Said Bad Business

A one-cent per gallon gasoline tax on Vancouver Island drivers to finance a four-lane highway between Victoria and Campbell River would be discriminatory and bad for business, Robert Strachan (NDP — Cowichan-Malahat) said Tuesday.

Mr. Strachan said he would fight "to my last breath" to oppose the proposal made by Frank Ney (SC — Nanaimo) last week in the Legislature.

While supporting the idea of the four-lane highway, Mr. Strachan said any regional tax of this kind is wrong in principle.

He said Vancouver Island produces one-third of the forest wealth of the province, which helps pay for all the highways in B.C.

"We have never had a fair share" of highways on Vancouver Island, Mr. Strachan said. And to put an extra tax on Vancouver Islanders would be "discriminatory."

He said that businessmen already pay higher costs than Mainlanders in higher freight costs and the further tax would increase these costs.

MLA Rips Quebec:

'Redel Beaten Brutally By Thugs, Not Policemen'

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE

The police beating of B.C.'s lands director Walter Redel Feb. 1 took place in the "stifling parochial atmosphere" of a province where Canada is divided by the two-language concept and where the rights and traditions cherished by western Canadians have gone "down the drain."

This sentiment was expressed Tuesday in B.C. Legislature by MLA Hunter Vogel (SC—Langley) and was the first strongly-worded public comment from any MLA about the pistol-whipping of Victoria resident Walter Redel as he strolled along a Quebec city street and was mistaken by provincial police for a bank robber.

RUIN IN SIGHT

Quoting from newspaper reports of Mr. Redel's experience, Mr. Vogel said the police "didn't speak any English except the single word, 'police'.

"But they could sure swing a gun butt."

Mr. Vogel said that everything Canada has worked for over the last 100 years will be ruined by a "deliberately divided country" that is soon to become "unmistakenly obvious."

Mr. Redel was "savagely pistol-whipped ... stripped naked and thrown into a cell ... there was no questioning—no charges were laid.

"The police were not in uniform, they offered no identification and they asked for no identification ..." Mr. Vogel said he had never heard of a prisoner not being allowed to make a telephone call in similar circumstances.

"They're not trained policemen ... they're thugs." It was more than police brutality, Mr. Vogel said.

"The real problem was that the Quebec policemen could not speak English and they didn't understand him."

He said the attack was a "brutal incident which dramatically emphasizes the fact that we are two Canadas divided by a language barrier."

Canadians should ask themselves, he said, "what happened to good old habeas corpus and a man's right under British law?"

TRADITIONS GONE

"All the rights and traditions that all western Canadians cherish ... are down the drain. They went down the drain with the English language.

"We have two Canadas in fact right now. That's the story here and we had better get the message," he said.

"This was alright in the donkey-cart economies of 20 years ago," but it won't work in the shrinking world "of the jumbo jet."

"The two language concept is a guarantee of a divided Canada."

Mr. Vogel said he feels sorry for "Canadians of French origin. Their political and spiritual leaders have led them up a blind alley. They're headed for the ghetto. This means second-class status."

And he said a French Canadian will become a "stranger beyond his own borders" because of Quebec's language bill.

"The western world will withdraw from this stifling parochial atmosphere that is being created there."

"The West will sooner or later have to realize that we have no voice in the East, in the federal government, and that Canadian policies tailored for the East are against the interest of all Canadians who live west of the Great Lakes. And that's a fact, too."

"The Redel incident dramatizes the fact of two Canadas—no communication."

"I just say, 'look out.' The frightening fact of a deliberately divided country will become unmistakenly obvious. The West is deeply concerned. Everything we have tried to create over 100 years is going down the drain."

Grain Trading Under Probe

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons agriculture committee has been empowered to look into the problem of non-quota feed grain being marketed at distress prices between the Lakehead and British Columbia's Peace River region.

The problem of trading and selling grain in the Prairie region at "unreasonably low prices" has developed with large surpluses and decreasing export markets.

Bottle Battle Urged for B.C.

James Chabot (SC—Columbia River) called on the B.C. Legislature Tuesday night for government action to control pollution caused by cans and disposable bottles.

"Bottle pollution is a real threat to our way of life," Mr. Chabot said. "I urge the government to open direct negotiation with bottle and tin can manufacturers to try to get them to switch to some other form of container. If this doesn't work the government should appeal through the press to the public to refrain from buying cans and disposable bottles.

"As a final resort the government may have to pass legislation to stop this form of pollution," he said.

Board Fate Awaits Minister

There has been no indication from Health Minister Ralph Loffmark of the fate of the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health, director Dr. John Whitbread reported Tuesday to the board.

The group met briefly for its regular meeting, but with the threat of dissolution hanging over it, made no major decisions. Most items were tabled or deferred for decision later.

Meanwhile, Oak Bay council Monday decided to send a resolution reinforcing Oak Bay's support for the principal of the regional concept of public health in Greater Victoria to Health Minister Ralph Loffmark, Premier Bennett and Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell.

Railway Fight Over B.C. Coal Reaches Ottawa Boardrooms

OTTAWA (CP) — The opening shots in a new battle between railway giants—the Canadian Pacific and the Great Northern railway companies—will be fired here next week concerning the movement of British Columbia coal to the Pacific coast for shipment to Japan.

Great Northern last week merged with Northern Pacific Railway.

CP Rail is applying to the Canadian transport commission for an order staying proceedings or requiring more particulars to be produced by Great Northern on a plan to move into the B.C. interior in competition with CP Rail.

The Canadian Pacific now is building a branch line to move coal from the mines of its subsidiary, Cominco, Ltd., 34 miles north of Natal to its existing line to Vancouver. Natal is near the Alberta border, 100 miles west of Lethbridge.

Crows Nest Industries Ltd. of Fernie with coal deposits east of Cominco's, also proposes to sell coal to Japan and is looking for freight facilities.

Fearing that CP Rail may not have the capacity to handle both Cominco and Crows Nest traffic, it is reported to have made a deal with Great Northern to build a 90-mile link running south to Montana. The line would be built either by Great Northern or by the Kootenay and Elk Railway Co., which was incorporated provincially in 1957 and owns some right-of-way, but no track—yet.

Two federal hurdles must be overcome, say informants. Transport commission approval must be obtained for the Kootenay and Elk to cross the CP Rail line east of Natal, and to cross the U.S. border just south of Roosville to connect with the Great Northern at Eureka, Mont.

CP Rail and Great Northern have been railway rivals for nearly a century, with the Canadian Pacific fighting—vainly, in some cases—to ward off intrusions of the American line into its Canadian territory.

Sources here indicate that B.C. provincial authorities are not opposing the Kootenay and Elk-Great Northern plan. They are said to believe some competition would be beneficial in the movement of B.C. coal to the new Vancouver superport of Roberts Bank.

CP Rail is expected to counter this with an argument that Canadian coal should be shipped through Canadian territory to a Canadian port for export to Japan. They say there is a danger that the coal, once in U.S. territory, will move along the Great Northern to its loading facilities at Seattle.

The Great Northern reaches Pacific tidewater at Everett, Wash., and coal could move north through Bellingham to Vancouver and Roberts Bank.

But the distance between Everett and Seattle is shorter. And the Crows Nest-Kootenay and Elk railway project is said to be backed by the Kaiser interests in the U.S.

Death Taxes Limit Lifted

By HARRY YOUNG
Business Editor

Premier Bennett tells me that as a result of his proposed tax changes, only one in a hundred people dying in British Columbia will now have to pay succession duties.

The new exemptions, which include the total value of the "family home" up to any amount (the previous limit was $35,000), and the first $3,000 year of pensions and annuities (previously $1,2001) will, according to the premier, make any estate up to about $160,000 in value, free of succession duties.

The premier added that succession duties payable above the exempt amount will start at the lowest tax bracket, and not as some had feared, at the rate applicable to the total net value of the estate.

"Our succession duty revenue will come from the really big estates, and that is just how it should be," said the premier.

In the past most of these estates have been able to avoid succession duties by making unlimited donations to charities.

Under the new rules only 10 per cent of the net value of any estate will be exempted in the hands of charitable organizations, and that only to organizations spelled out in the statute.

Mr. Bennett denied that "discretion" would remain in the hands of the finance minister as to what charities were acceptable.

"It is laid out in black and white in the new regulations, and if there is any doubt as to eligibility it will be for the courts and not the government to decide," he said.

No Taxe Haven Now

On the face of it, British Columbia's wealthy old men and women can say goodbye to the idea they are living in a tax haven. Their bequests to charity will be exempt from succession duties only as to one-tenth of the total estate, and then the gift will have to be made for B.C. use as well as being unconditional in its end use by the benefiting organization.

BONDS LOOK BETTER

The brightest side of the investment picture at the moment is the bond market.

Nearly everyone is making noises to suggest that interest rates have reached their peaks, and the promise of the chartered banks that they will hold the line on their charges is fairly conclusive proof that the worst is over — banks don't usually take too many chances.

The bond market opened firm this week, and government long issues have gained considerably. The big 4½-per-cent issue of 1983 rose from a Monday bid of 69¼ to 70 on Tuesday.

Mid-term governments rose over one-quarter and a new interest was taken in provincials. Two new issues trading over their original prices were the Ontario Hydro 9-per-cent issue at 101 and the Hudson Bay Acceptance 9½-per-cent at 101¼ (the latter were marketed at 99½).

The better bond market tone is the result of evidence that government and corporate new financing is easing off and the expectation is there will be few new issues placed on the market until borrowing becomes less expensive.

Domestic Buyers Sought

The shareholders of Toronto Star Ltd. Monday approved a special resolution that will give the directors power to prevent more than 20 per cent of the company's shares from falling into foreign ownership.

The resolution is required because of the forthcoming sale of 500,000 new B shares to the public.

If Canadian newspapers have less than-80-per-cent Canadian ownership, they are not classified to rank as Canadian publications in the terms of the Income Tax act.

Advertisers have to use Canadian publications to enable themselves to write off advertising costs as a business expense.

Consolidated says if the permit is awarded it will construct a major pipeline at a cost of $200,000,000 to handle the gas.

Junior Achievers Learn the Basics

By HELEN MORRIS

One night every week, about 200 Victoria area senior high school students spend their time learning that money makes money—and how it's done.

They belong to the Junior Achievement movement.

"There are 10 companies of about 20 people each in Victoria Junior Achievement. Each company has three advisers from a business in town—one in manufacturing, one in sales, and one in office procedure.

"Every company begins and liquidates within a year. At the beginning of the year you sell stock—usually for $1 a share and then, out of that money, you buy your materials."

Then you're in business.

JA companies make things like tow-ropes—Kathy's company makes them, and they're selling very well—and glass flowers and key chains and wall-papered ice-cream-carton, garbage cans and silk-screened guaranteed washable placemats.

A company can sell its products anywhere, but most sales are made door-to-door. Some companies do a portion of their selling through downtown stores, but very much of this is frowned on as "too easy." Probably, too as not shrewd—downtown companies take a commission.

After selling comes a rather rude lesson in the democratic way-of-life: sales tax. Kathy, as treasurer for Jatel, the tow rope company, sends 5 per cent of sales profits to the B.C. government.

Your average blue-collared JA worker gets 25 cents an hour out of the profits, and every member of the company gets a 10 per cent commission on everything he or she sells. Secretary and treasurer each get two dollars a month from the profits and Mr. President who, Kathy explained, "doesn't really have any work to do, but a lot of responsibility," gets five dollars a month.

Junior Achievers learn, too, that making money takes money. Besides paying sales tax, companies must pay rent on the machines they use, the rooms they work in and the materials they work with.

No self-respecting company is without its labor problems, but in JA labor disputes are somewhat simplified. Whether or not in the true spirit of free enterprise, JA has a rule which prevents any company from making more than a 30 per cent profit.

If a company is in a position to pay back more than $1.30 on shareholders original $1 investments, Kathy said, the company must raise its workers' wages.

At the end of the year the company of the year is chosen on the basis of profits, course attendance, and the bookkeeping job accomplished.

And even if you lose, you win. "It's an education in itself. You really learn a lot," says Kathy.

You learn, according to JA chairman Bill Henderson, a Victoria businessman, "things you can't learn anywhere else — not in high schools, or in universities, or anywhere like that. You learn how to run a business.

"Most of us learn by trial and error. Usually you lose your shirt in trial and error, but in Junior Achievement the kids get to go through their trial and error without losing a lot of money.

"And I don't mind being quoted as saying that we don't think profit is a dirty word. Our whole system is based on profit. That's what democracy is all about, as opposed to communism."

Big Business Backs Price Limit Stand

Wage Demand Curb Urged

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP) —More than 200 business leaders agreed Tuesday that Canadian industry should limit price increases in 1970 if called upon to do so by next week's federal-provincial premiers' conference.

Agreement was reached in open session at a national conference on price stability, called by the federal government's prices and incomes commission, after hours of private argument over terms and conditions.

WAGE LIMIT

The final document from the conference spelled out the criteria to be observed by various sections of industry. In general, the objective is to keep price increases for the balance of this year below cost increases, while calling on labor to limit its wage demands.

Dr. John Young, chairman of the commission and of the conference, said he will take the document to the meeting of provincial premiers and Prime Minister Trudeau opening here next Monday. It will then be up to them to make the formal call on industry.

In his drive to check inflation, Dr. Young's next move will be to seek labor support. He would not say specifically, however, what he would do.

LEADERS MEET

The conference brought together 240 leaders of all major industries, agriculture, and the professions. Some left before the conference closed because of a severe storm crippling transportation from the capital.

After reading the statement setting forth the price restraint criteria and procedures for policing them with examination of company accounts, Dr. Young held up the sheaf of papers and asked whether it was agreed. Most delegates put up their hands.

Dr. Young then slammed the table and said, "All right, we've got that." He did not ask for a show of hands against the consensus statement, but described the agreement later as almost unanimous.

LESS THAN COST

The statement said that business firms generally, "if called upon to do so," would reduce the number and size of price increases they would normally make in 1970, and ensure that price increases are "clearly less than the amount needed to cover increases in costs."

The statement also said that "an indispensable requirement" for controlling inflation is a comparable measure of restraint "by wage- and salary-earners, by governments at all levels, and indeed by everyone."

It recognized some special circumstances in certain industries. Some export goods are sold at higher prices abroad than in Canada; farmers have little individual power to determine their selling prices, and professional groups will limit or postpone increases that cannot be easily measured against cost increases.

The transportation, telecommunications and utilities industries—largely regulated now by various federal and provincial bodies—will give the prices commission 30 days notice of any general rate increases.

Retailers will not increase their mark-ups over wholesalers' prices, recognizing at the same time that some goods have to be marked down for bargain sales in a slow market. The construction industry asked for special recognition of its cost increase rates and widely variable level of activity.

The prices commission will undertake reviews of individual cases to check compliance.

Dr. Young said it has sufficient power to do so as a royal commission on investigation under the Inquiries Act.

The year 1969 will be the base period against which price increases will be judged—except in cases where unusual circumstances, such as a prolonged strike, made 1969 unrepresentative.

ENTHUSIASM FELT

"We're going to make it work," said Dr. Young, slapping a reporter gleefully on the shoulder.

Flange Firm Loses Plug

SYDNEY, Australia (UPI) — A judge ruled Tuesday that an Australian firm can legally manufacture 33-cent stoppers for metal drums, resolving a suit by an American firm and ending the longest court case in Australian history.

★ ★ ★

Justice Frederick Myers ordered the plaintiff, American Flange and Manufacturing Co. of New York City, to pay the $1,000,000 in court costs.

The case opened Aug. 3, 1966, when American Flange sued to keep Rheem Australia Ltd. from manufacturing zinc and steel stoppers for use in 44-gallon metal drums, claiming it had exclusive rights to the manufacturing process.

More than 3,000,000 words and 600 exhibits were offered in the case. At one point in 1967, Rheem insured the life of Judge Myers for $560,000 lest he die after having absorbed such complicated information.

A group of Australian lawyers and clerks once flew to the United States and stayed 20 days taking evidence from a witness to ill to go to Australia to testify.

In 1968, Jack Smyth, lawyer for American Flange, turned to the bench and told Judge Myers, "I am sorry, your honor, I cannot keep all this evidence in my mind."

★ ★ ★

"Neither can I," said Judge Myers.

In April, 1968, Smyth set a court record by staying on his feet for 62 consecutive days arguing legal points. Jack Cassidy, lawyer for Rheem, later spent 75 straight days presenting his case.

Smyth's final address lasted 27 days. Legal costs of the case were nearly $2,800 a day.

Grant Approved

Esquimalt Backs Cool-Aid

Esquimalt council Monday night narrowly approved the municipality's 8.5 per cent share of a $5,340 intermunicipal grant to the youth organization Cool-Aid.

Strongest opposition to the grant came from Ald. J. W. Bell, who told council he had visited the premises in which Cool-Aid offered shelter to young transients.

SELECT GROUP

"The whole thing looked like a club to me with the difference that the public is sponsoring it. In one room, I saw mattresses all over the floor," he said.

"The audacity of this group wanting to open another house of this kind absolutely floors me," he added.

"I was also told that not every transient is admitted by Cool-Aid. It caters to a select group of people."

Asked who had given him that information, Ald. Bell said, "a couple of hippies I gave a ride to in my car."

Ald. Arthur Mebs also told council he couldn't vote for the motion to participate in the grant.

NO NECESSITY

"I don't see the necessity of Cool-Aid. What's wrong with the established agencies with their university-trained people?" he asked.

"I can't help but think that at Cool-Aid the transients are probably allowed to do things they can't do anywhere else."

Mayor Arthur Young said Cool-Aid had been investigated by the Victoria Community Council. In a report, the council had stated that Cool-Aid was worthy of support.

FUNDS WASTED

The aldermen were supported in their opposition to the grant by an Esquimalt citizen who said in a letter to council that no public funds should be wasted on hippies.

"How can you expect our senior citizens to keep roofs over their heads when they also have to contribute their share to Cool-Aid houses?" Mrs. Pat Dunlop of 877 Ellery asked in her letter.

Voting for the motion were Mayor Young, Ald. Arthur Cuthbert, E. L. De Costa and Walter Lock.

Ald. Kenneth Hill, Mebs and Bell voted against the motion.

Sensational New Hearing Aid Costs Less Than 10 Cents Per Year To Operate

Space age technology has come to the hearing aid industry. A new hearing aid has been developed that actually costs less than ten cents per year to operate. This is a far cry from the $25 to $70 a year the average hearing aid costs to run. Aid also automatically controls speech interfering noises and can be custom adjusted for correct hearing on the spot. That's what we've been doing in 1969. Building a bigger and better Company. A new billion -- plus sales record and the greatest annual increase in ownership of our products.

This is the kind of "building" we like, simply because it means a great many individuals are looking ahead and doing something about their future -- a good way of making things better.

And we're building in another way. Later this year our new expanded "plant" will be completed. Additional facilities to help us manufacture better products and to provide better service to our clients throughout the world.

Decathlon Champion Finds Success Brings Odd Feeling

By JOHN WIEBUSCH

LOS ANGELES — He had not slept but it was not because he had not tried and so he slipped into some shoes and moved quietly down the stairs. He sought a relaxant and he found it behind the wheel of the car and he drove north out of Laguna Beach, along the seascape that is the Coast Highway.

"I drove for a long time," said Bill Toomey, "and while I drove I thought of everything that had happened, of how it had been. And I said to myself, 'Bill Toomey, you're the Olympic champion,' and then I thought that maybe nothing had happened and that maybe all of this was nothing more than a grand illusion. Because here's the thing: it's always difficult for me to realize that I've won something, anything, because I know my capabilities and I think, 'Hey, baby, you're just not that good.'

CAN'T AFFORD IT

"I am not a planned winner. I never have been. And you know why? because I can't afford to be."

He talked of the whys and hows of track and field and of his deep involvement with it and of the decathlon, the 10-event ordeal which is said to determine sport's greatest athlete.

"It is a 'self' thing," he said. "Track has to be that way. There has to be a self-satisfaction. I have confidence in myself and what I can do, of course, or nothing would be happening. I am proud of my discipline and of my ability to respond to particular situations, but I do not consider that I am a great athlete."

HE STANDS ALONE

It is a modesty that is genuine but it is a modesty that withers in the light of what has happened — and what has happened is that Bill Toomey stands alone at the top of his specialty.

His is the world record for the decathlon, an 8417-point total accomplished at UCLA in December. In the history of the sport there have been nine scores over 8200 and six of them belong to Bill Toomey. In the past four years he has competed in 28 decathlons and there have been only three losses. One was when he was sick, another when he was injured and another was when the competition set a world record.

And along with it all have come the recognition, the trophies, the plaques, the back slapping. It has not awed the man.

"It's a weird feeling," he said, "and it's very hard to explain but it's just that I've conditioned myself not to be emotional. I don't expect anything, honestly.

"Not that the things that have come to me haven't been meaningful. I never fail to appreciate things. It's just like that Olympic gold medal. It took me a long time to realize what it meant and there are times when I think that maybe I don't realize even now what it stands for.

IMPORTANT THING

"You see I've been in two Olympic trials (1964 and 1968) and both times the only thing I've thought of was just making the team. That is the important thing. Some day, maybe, someone will write a book about the Olympics. Not about the events and what happened, but about the things that lead up to it. A man runs 100 meters in 10 seconds and that's all most people think about. That is only a tiny, tiny part of what happens, though. It's just the manifestation.

DIFFERENT AT 31

"I don't want to be blase about all this but I don't want to play a role, either. But the kind of thing I really dig is when a friend from The New York Times calls to say that I've won an award and he tells me how great it is. And so I think, 'isn't it great he thinks it's great.' And I feel good about it.

"Maybe if I were 21 instead of 31 my reaction would be different and I could gush and ooh and ah about everything. But it's just the way I've become. Like in travel. I'll be going to Paris for a weekend in two weeks. Most people would be excited about it. To me, it's just another weekend."

SELECTIVE IN THRILLS

He paused and grinned, realizing what he had said. "I don't mean to sound jaded but I guess it's just that I've become more selective in my thrills. I am — honestly — looking forward to competing in the Los Angeles Times Indoor Games Friday. Indoor track is not my bag — it's a lot of fun but it's not designed for my kind of thing — but The Times Meet is one of the ones with class. And I would like to emphasize that it will not be my last track meet. I have no immediate plans to leave the amateurs."

ANYTHING POSSIBLE

There have been murmurs that Toomey is retiring from track and field to sign lucrative contracts that would lead to endorsements and commercials. Several film studios also reportedly are interested.

"Anything is possible," he said, "and nothing is sure. Right now I'm an amateur and I'll be competing in the long jump and the mile relay Friday night at The Forum. On Sunday I'll be in New York and on the following weekend I'll be in Paris. In between I'll be teaching English to freshmen at Santa Barbara JC. Those are the only things that I can say with certainty now."

HARRY YOUNG

It has been said that more business is done by many people on the golf course than they do in their offices. For the authenticity of this theory I have no conclusive proof but certainly golf clubs derive a considerable part of their revenue from members on expense accounts.

Because of the federal tax reform proposals, now under consideration, that would exclude expense accounts as legitimate income tax deductions, many of Canada's deluxe golf clubs are seriously worried.

"The real big spenders are the business executives who entertain their clients in the clubhouse," said an official of one eastern club I met in Montreal last week while attending the annual general meeting of the Royal Canadian Golf Association.

He feared that if such entertaining is not to be allowed as a tax-deductible expense many clubs will be faced with new economic difficulties which will only be solved by increasing dues and entry fees.

He argued that golf-club spending was a legitimate business charge because of the great volume of business that is done on the course and in the locker room.

The situation is serious enough to have persuaded the Royal Canadian Golf Association to prepare a brief for presentation to the Finance Minister Benson, protesting this part of his white paper proposals.

After a period of seven years the Willingdon Cup is to be restored to its full glory as a national and inter-provincial team championship.

The RCGA decision to separate the Willingdon from the amateur championship is a reversal of the stand taken in the early 1960s, when a majority favored playing the Willington simultaneously with the qualifying rounds of the amateur.

The wisdom of the step was questioned by many, including the B.C. Golf Association, which always thought that if the Willingdon was worth playing at all it was worth playing well.

The fact that there is now no qualifying stage for the Canadian Amateur — it lost its match play aspect last year — has convinced the RCGA that the time had come to revert to the old system.

Under the revised formula, the Willingdon Cup event will be played on the Monday and Tuesday of the "amateur week," followed Wednesday to Saturday by the four rounds of the championship.

In order that no advantage will be given to Willingdon competitors, the other amateur entrants will have the use of the course on Monday and Tuesday afternoons for practice purposes.

The real losers in the shuffle are the members of some Willingdon Cup teams, who may find themselves excluded altogether from the amateur.

If Willingdon Cup players have a higher handicap than that prescribed for the amateur, they will be excluded. Hitherto all Willingdon Cup players have been automatically entered in the amateur no matter what their handicap was.

It is thus quite possible that in a "hot" field, such as the one at Royal Colwood in 1967, when the top handicap limit was cut to two, a large number of the Willingdon Cup men would be excluded.

□

The same formula will apply to the Junior Inter-provincial team matches and the Canadian junior championship, although in this case all team players will automatically be allowed to play in the individual championship.

The only innovation from last year's junior at Kelowna is that a special trophy is to be awarded the player of 16 years and under who has the best four-round total in the championship.

It is hoped this will be an incentive to the younger players, who might have little chance in winning the title.

A new award, the Bailey Memorial Trophy is being presented for this event. It will honor the name of Jack Bailey, a Toronto governor of the RCGA, who died last year in an accident.

□

The RCGA has accepted an invitation from the Brazil Golf Association to send a three-man team to Sao Paulo next May to participate in an international amateur event.

The Canadian team will have its expenses paid by Brazil.

The competition will in some way substitute for the Americas Cup event between Canada, the U.S. and Mexico, which has been abandoned at the request of the USGA.

Canada's other international participation this year is in the World Cup to be held in Spain.

John Carlow, who held the post of president of the Gorge Vale club for 10 consecutive years before retiring a few years ago, has been re-elected.

A former president of the B.C. Golf Association, John made his comeback at the annual general meeting of the Gorge Vale club Monday. He takes the place of Hugh Reid, who had served the last two years and was not standing for re-election.

Other officials elected included Iver Hansen, the vice-president, Art Bridge, Gary Small and Cliff Soberg, directors, all of them newcomers to office.

□

A meeting of the captains of the Victoria District Golf clubs is being held at Gorge Vale Thursday to discuss this season's local open tournament formula.

It will be followed a week later by the annual meeting of the district committee.

Owners Not Satisfied . . .

. . . But Pilots Will Stay

Seattle Given One-Year Reprieve

CHICAGO (AP) — The Pilots will remain in Seattle at least one more year but the American League may become a trustee of the baseball club until sound financial ownership can be obtained.

League president Joe Cronin indicated Tuesday that some club owners were not satisfied with the proposed restructuring of Seattle's financial status.

Cronin said that league counsel was in the process of talking to the Bank of California on the mechanics of renegotiating a $3,500,000 loan to the club. Conditions of the loan have created problems for would-be purchasers.

Before voting to leave the club in Seattle, the owner group heard a presentation from the new 'rescue squad', headed by Edward E. Carlson, trying to save the Seattle franchise.

Carlson and Seattle businessmen Jim Ellis, James Douglas and Mechlin Moore outlined their plans to take over operation of the Pilots from the original owners, headed by William Daley of Cleveland.

Representatives of Milwaukee and Fort Wort-Dallas groups, which hoped to get the franchise if the league rejected Seattle's final financial proposition, were ready to present plans to the meeting.

Forwards Chris Riddell and Shayne Webster and defenceman Gerry Bond all enjoyed five-point nights as Cougars collected 34 scoring points to delight of 1442 fans.

START DELAYED

The game was more than an hour late in starting. The New Westminster club's plane was fogged in at Vancouver Airport and the Royals had to catch the 7 p.m. ferry.

Fans were entertained by an exhibition peewee game and an Oak Bay High School band, on hand for the special night to raise money for the school orchestras' trip to the world fair in Tokyo.

WASTED NO TIME

Once the first puck was dropped at 9:38, Cougars wasted no time in taking over. Shibicky collected his seventh goal of the season with just seven seconds gone and added his eighth later in the period.

They were the only two goals the centre and his wingers, Murray Kennett and Scott Munro, were to collect but the line forechecked superbly and completely dominated the short-handed Royals.

Playing with only 13 players including two goalkeepers.

Royals avoided the shutout at 17:32 of the opening period when Buchanan shot over Forslund's left shoulder on a breakaway. He had stolen the puck at his own blueline on a deflected pass between defencemen Laurie Moore and Randy Bock.

The goal made it a respectable 2-1 at the end of the period although Cougars outshot Royals, 18-5.

DAM BURSTS

The dam burst for Royals in the second period when Cougars fired nine unanswered goals for an 11-1 lead which tied their previous record for goals in a game, established last year and tied this season.

Cougars held a 25-4 margin of shots in the period, which produced the only penalties of the game, three minors to New Westminster and two majors — Moore for charging and Webster for spearing — to Victoria.

GOALKEEPER CHANGE

Dave McLelland was retired from the game after allowing the 10th Cougar goal. He had stopped 26 shots. Maurice L'Heureux played the rest of the way, allowing four goals and stopping 17 shots.

Ron Northcott

Already six of the provincial representatives for the national final at Winnipeg, March 2-6, have been decided and four have played in the Canadian championship previously.

STILL IN RUNNING

In addition, former Canadian champions Terry Braunstein of Winnipeg, and Hector Gervais of Edmonton are still in the running at the provincial level along with defending world titlist Ron Northcott of Calgary.

Other top names still in the running provincially are Doug Wankel of Elbow, Sask., and Bob Pickering of Avonlea, Sask.

And Merv Mann of Saskatoon, who has won practically every curling championship except a provincial title, still remains in contention for the Saskatchewan championship.

ALREADY IN

Lyall Pagg of Vancouver, the 1964 world champion, has already won the right to represent British Columbia, Hap Mabey of Moncton will represent New Brunswick for the fifth time, and Ron Franklyn of Halifax will be returning to the national final for the third time.

Prince Edward Island will also have a familiar face returning. Art Burke of Charlottetown, who skippered the Islanders in 1964, will be leading his rink back to the national finals.

BOWRING NEW

Among newcomers, Lester Bowring of St. John's will skip the Newfoundland representative and Paul Savage, 22, of Toronto, leads the Ontario foursome.

The Manitoba championship, which opened Monday, runs through Saturday, while Saskatchewan is still involved in separate championships for the titles in the north and south.

The Saskatchewan provincial finals open next weekend.

Gervais and Northcott are in the Alberta playoff this weekend, while the Quebec championship is currently in progress.

A Northern Ontario representative will be decided in a playoff at Thunder Bay this weekend.

Nanaimo Quartet Wins Title

CLOVERDALE — A Nanimo rink, skipped by Don MacRae, will represent British Columbia in the Canadian seniors' curling championships at Kamloops starting Feb. 23.

Playing on swingy ice, MacLeod fell behind 5-7 in the afternoon after holding a 5-2 lead but scored two on each of the eighth, ninth and tenth ends for the win.

On near perfect ice in the evening, MacRae lost an early lead when Hallquist counted three on the fifth end and another on the seventh end for a 5-3 lead. But the Nanaimo quarter cracked a four-ender on the eighth, stole one on the ninth and claimed the title when the Summerland rink ran out of rocks on the home end.

Colwood Archery Course a Beauty

We went out to the archery course of the Victoria Bowmen on Wilfert Road Saturday and found it not too much unlike a golf course. This outdoor field course is rated as the finest in Canada and features 30 targets, covering a one and one-half-mile course, and competition takes nearly two hours for each course of 15 targets, making a good four-hour outing if you shoot the whole course.

To us this was archery with a new look.

We, of course, knew about field courses, but we hadn't given them much thought. Archery to our minds had been a group of bow and arrow faddists standing back 40 or 50 yards and firing away at brilliantly-painted targets pinned to a stack of straw bales . . . a social activity. We also knew a few "crackpots" took to the woods to try and bag some grouse or a deer with a bow and arrow.

NEW PERSPECTIVE

Our Saturday outing gave us a new perspective on archery . . . a pleasant experience, one about which we could easily become enthusiastic.

Some of the regular archers use the field course to dampen their skills for actual hunting in the field, but most find the field course fine competitive sport and good outdoor fun.

This course is in a lovely setting on national defence property off Wilfert Road at Colwood. Dockyard Archers and Victoria Bowmen share in its use.

OTHER FACILITIES

There is a target range which offers target shooting up to 100 yards . . . and there is a barbecue pit, kiddies playground and picnic shelter for outdoor get togethers, which are a weekly event in fine weather.

But, it is the field course which is the big attraction.

It is set in wooded area, through tall timbers, across a babbling brook, across meadowland and over moss-covered rocks. Even if you don't shoot, the course makes a nice stroll.

NATURE STUDY

Deer wander along the course and occasionally archers have to wait until they move away before they can shoot at the targets. Raccoons and mink drink at the brook, pheasants are quite numerous and the occasional grouse is seen . . . all are protected in this area and members wouldn't have it any other way.

It provides a nature study in itself and members are quick to point out animal tracks, deer rubs on trees, mouse holes, and even a "highway" used by a colony of ants.

OFF LIMITS

Archers on our trip around the first 15 targets were Bill Hall, past president of the club, an actual archery hunter who has met with considerable success on birds and big game, and one of Canada's top archers; Vi Muir, club treasurer; Adelle Bishop, one of the club's top shooters; and Ray Bishop, archery coach. Hall is now organizing an archery division of the Fish and Game Club with Tuesday night meets at Goldstream.

First position is just a short walk from the picnic and target area, into the woods, for a two-position, 35-yard course as a warmup.

Then deeper into the woods for a four-position course on which the shooters aim from some fairly difficult angles.

We wondered how the archers could tell which arrows were theirs and we learned that all arrows have different-colored fetchings (feathers or plastic) and each archer has a different color bar on the arrows.

TREES FOR OBSTACLES

Then came a 55-yard one-position course, through the trees, over the creek and uphill, a rather difficult target, with the trees as obstacles.

There are four different sizes of targets used on the course . . . the closer the range the smaller the target.

Then came a 45-yard downhill shot, which often fools archers.

Most archers use sites, although it isn't absolutely necessary. For this downhill shot they would set the sight at about 42 yards instead of the actual 45-yard distance.

Then came a 20-yard uphill target, across the creek where deer are often seen at a favorite watering hole.

Then came one of the most difficult targets . . . four positions at 80, 70, 60, 50 yards, one arrow each. Women don't usually shoot the 80-yard target because of the danger of losing their arrows, which cost around $4 each.

TOP OF BLUFF

Then across the meadow to the top of a rock bluff for a 55-yard downhill shot into the dark bush, and the bush creates an optical illusion which often fools the target shooters.

A special four-position 10-yard target simulates conditions under which archers might shoot at grouse. Another features 30, 25, 20 and 15-yard positions through tunnels in the trees and bush.

MOST INTERESTING

The 15th target is the most interesting of the course . . . shooters have to shoot through narrow openings between trees to hit the 40-yard target just as they might while deer shooting.

The club has solved the course maintenance problem. Each target is under the care of one particular member and it is his duty to keep the brush and trail cleared, bales in order, and to make the target interesting.

On these courses there are various rounds. A hunter's round is where competitors try to hit the target with one arrow. They get three chances. First arrow in gives most points and they lose points for each miss.

FOUR ARROWS EACH

In winter — October to April — the archers shoot indoors at 20-yard targets, Wednesday nights at the Dockyard Recreation Hall, behind Naden . . . then they move outdoors.

New members are welcome at any of a dozen clubs on Vancouver Island, five in the Victoria area . . . and you can get started for about $60 for a bow and arrows.

Orr, who holds the NHL records for goals, assists and total points by a defenceman, has eclipsed a professional hockey record set by Sinden in the 1961-62 season.

The Bruin coach was then playing for Kingston Frontenacs of the now-defunct Eastern Professional League. Sinden picked up 61 assists to establish a professional record for defencemen.

Orr passed the total Sunday when he picked up an assist in a 7-1 victory over St. Louis Blues.

Blues' Barcley Plager had 61 assists to tie Sinden's record while playing for Omaha Knights of the Central league in 1963-64.

Orr, who holds a 10-point lead over teammate Phil Esposito, is one goal shy of the record 21 he scored last season for 82 points including the 62 assists.

Ferguson Home

MONTREAL (UPI) — Montreal Canadiens announced that John Ferguson had been released from hospital in Minnesota Tuesday and returned to Montreal later in the day. Doctors at the Methodist Hospital in Minneapolis reported there was no injury to Ferguson's vision, but that there was a slight fracture to the cheek.

Timid Players Anger Bowman

ST. LOUIS (AP) —General manager and coach Scotty Bowman, angry because of apparent indifference to let a teammate take a beating, sent three of his slumping St. Louis Blues players to the minors Monday and blasted the team for a lack of aggressiveness.

Centre Andre Boudrias and wingers Larry Keenan and Ron Anderson were dropped from the National Hockey League club's varsity roster.

Bowman complained the Blues had allowed teammates to be roughed up last week without trying to help them.

"In Pittsburgh last week when Barclay Plager had his nose broken, three Pittsburgh players pummeled him and none of the Blues came to help him," Bowman said.

He said Wayne Maki also took a drubbing in Sunday's televised 7-1 loss to Boston ". . . and none of his teammates did anything about it."

Terry Crisp has been called up from Buffalo and defenceman Bill Plager, who had been called up on an emergency basis from Kansas City, will stay on, Bowman said.

Terry Gray, who is recovering from a knee injury, will be sent to Kansas City for about 10 days to work back into shape, the coach said.

Tony Esposito Credits Club

CHICAGO (AP) — "No goal" has been the byword of Chicago Black Hawks' fans ever since Tony Esposito, younger brother of Boston Bruins' record-breaking scorer, Phil Esposito, has taken over the nets for Chicago's National Hockey League entry.

The 26-year-old goalie, whom Montreal Canadiens did not protect in the draft, is the big reason the East Division Hawks think they can jump from last place in 1968-69 to a Stanley Cup berth this season.

Esposito, who played only 13 games for the Canadiens last season and recorded two shutouts, lacks a standard style—he flip-flops, roves around the nets and even takes a crack at the stand-up style.

So effective has he been that he has 11 shutouts, a club record, and has taken aim at the National Hockey League standard of 13 set by Harry Lumley of Toronto Maple Leafs in the 1953-54 season.

"You have to give the guys in front of me a lot of credit," says Esposito who is well aware the Hawks have abandoned their torrid offensive game in favor of a stronger defence.

And even when the Hawk defence fails, Esposito refuses to use it as a crutch.

"No matter how the team plays in front of me, I have the last say on the puck. If it gets by me, it's my fault."

Esposito, five-feet-11 and 195 pounds, has what he calls "my book" on the opposition.

"Many of the players come in at you the same way most of the time and you can figure just what they're going to do," he says.

"But not the stars . . . you can't anticipate them. Every play is different with them and if you commit yourself, you're dead."

Surgery Not Necessary

CHICAGO (AP) — A knee injury suffered by defenceman Pat Stapleton of Chicago Black Hawks will not require surgery as earlier feared, the National Hockey League club's physician said Tuesday.

Dr. Myron Tremaine said ligaments were torn in Stapleton's left knee when it struck the Black Hawk goal post during Saturday's 4-4 tie with Philadelphia Flyers here.

"The knee will be in a cast for a while, but there won't be any surgery," the doctor said.

★ ★ ★

The injury came in the midst of a standout season for Stapleton, who has contributed 42 points to the Black Hawks' hot pursuit of the fourth and final playoff spot in the East Division.

Judge's Advice: Stay Away from Booze

"Good luck . . . I hope you make it," Judge William Ostler said Tuesday in Victoria Provincial Court to a 34-year-old Saanich man who had just been sentenced for possession of a dangerous weapon.

Wilfred John Humphreys, 742 Violet, was found guilty Jan. 26 after court was told he brandished a knife during a domestic dispute Jan. 22 involving his wife and another man. Tuesday, Judge Ostler noted from a pre-sentence report that the Humphreys had reconciled and a job was available.

Judge Ostler said Humphreys' trouble is "a great sense of inadequacy and insecurity," and added drinking isn't going to give him the answer.

"Stay away from the booze," he told Humphreys, giving him a suspended sentence and 18-month probationary term.

"You are to take that job and stay with it if you can. Good luck. . . . I hope you make it. But there is a special burden on you. Stay away from liquor."

"I am quite unable to work up any sympathy for a man who will drive a beer glass into another man's face," Judge Ostler said to Robert Kelly White, 21, of 1429 Vining, "You are sentenced to 45 days in jail."

White pleaded guilty Jan. 30 to a charge of assault causing bodily harm. Court was told another man threw a glass of beer at him in licensed premises at 1140 Government and White picked up another glass, broke it and pushed it in the first man's face, inflicting five minor cuts.

□

A suspended sentence and 18-month probationary term were given to William John Scherk, 20, of 520 Craigflower, who pleaded guilty Feb. 2 to breaking into a car-lot office in Saanich the day before and taking a station wagon.

Judge Ostler told Scherk: "It's essential for you to understand this is the last chance you are going to get. . . . This is just the end of the line for you."

He explained a pre-sentence report indicated doubt that probation would succeed because of Scherk's past drinking and irresponsible behavior. But the judge gave Scherk "one more chance" and said that, if he does not change his ways, "you will have only yourself to blame."

A joint charge of conspiracy to defraud Woodward's was read in the court section of Judge J. A. Byers against Roger Hucal, 30, no fixed address, and Veronica June Long, 20, of Vancouver .

The charge mentioned refunding Dec. 31 of an electrical appliance and wearing apparel. Prosecutor John Macintyre said two others are sought in the case, which was remanded to Feb. 18 for plea and election of trial method.

□

After a trial before Judge Ostler, Gary Lloyd Heshedahl, 19, of 1283 Astoria, was found guilty on a charge of theft. The charge involved the theft of a purse containing $353 Jan. 17 from a barber shop at 740 Humboldt, and Heshedahl was remanded to Feb. 17 for sentence after a pre-sentence report.

□

Norman Leroy Elgin, 22, of 3560 Saanich Road, was fined $150 for false pretences. He pleaded guilty Jan. 30 to a charge involving an attempt to obtain cash at The Bay the day before through a worthless cheque.

□

Fines totalling $200 were given to George William Christensen, 25, of 115 Cheltenham, who pleaded guilty to a four-count charge laid under the Unemployment Insurance Act. Court was told he made false statements regarding earnings last August and September, receiving $107 more than he was entitled to. The money has since been recovered.

□

Mrs. Eleen Halling, 50, of Vancouver, was fined $100 for impaired driving.

Flag Flies Over Arctic

EDMONTON (CP) — A Canadian Forces flight has completed Canada's first "sovereignty tour" and left Edmonton Monday to return to its base. The Argus aircraft from 415 Squadron at Summerside, P.E.I., began an aerial surveillance of Canada's Arctic regions last Thursday.

First Tenants For Blanshard Due in April 1

First 33 tenants are expected to move into Blanshard Court April 1, said B.C. Housing Management Commission spokesman Ernest Roberts Tuesday.

If work stays on schedule, all 184 subsidized rental units will be ready for occupancy June 1, said Mr. Roberts.

The urban renewal project, co-sponsored by the city, the province and the federal government, lies between Hillside and Bay, and between Rose and Dowler Place (formerly Blanshard).

Mr. Roberts said it is hoped to open 33 units with three and four bedrooms by April 1, 69 one and two bedroom suites May 1, and the remaining 82 large units June 1.

His office has 21 applications from area residents who were displaced by the project, Mr. Roberts said. These will be given priority.

Blanshard Court will be open to anyone whose gross monthly income doesn't exceed $500. Rents will be pegged to income, running from 20 per cent minimum to 27.4 per cent of income at the $500 level, Mr. Roberts said.

Maximum rent payable will be $137 monthly.

Mr. Roberts said he has twice as many applications as he has units available. Many of the applicants are elderly, he said

Priority is being given to couples who registered early, he added.

Yacht Clubbers Threaten Move

The Royal Victoria Yacht Club threatened Monday that it might seek a new location if a controversial forthcoming application to extend its waterlease into Loon Bay is refused.

Commodore Oliver Summers, who spoke on behalf of the club before Oak Bay council, stressed that an application had not yet been made, but said if one were and it were refused, "we might have to seek another location."

He said he did not know if that statement would help his case or not.

"This is quite a serious problem for us," he said. "At present we cannot moor boats there (at the club) in winter and have to take them ashore.

"In the past few years the sport of winter sailing has grown."

Mr. Summers, who said the Royal Victoria Yacht Club is not a rich man's playground, noted that the possibility of building a breakwaster as an alternative had already been considered.

"But breakwaters are extremely expensive and it is doubtful that we could afford it or get the necessary permission.

MUD BANK

"We think the Loon Bay area will be cleaned up quite considerably by the dredging that would be necessary if our moors were installed. At present it is a mud bank."

Several homeowners in the area have already indicated their opposition to the proposed expansion.

"Would you think this type of development would increase or decrease the property value of the homes near it," asked Dr. Reuben Matiko of 3140 Hymber.

"If it would decrease it, would you consider reducing our taxes?"

Dr. Matiko noted that many of the homes on Humber Road are expensive and said the already limited market for such property might be further limited "if there were boats in your backyard."

WADING DANGER

Municipal administrator E. H. Hart pointed out that the beach is heavily used by families in the summer and that at low tide children might wade out and fall into the dredged area.

Ald. Norman Pimlott said the municipality would have no control over power boats using the area and said there would be no point from the existing beach where there would be a view of open water if the expansion were allowed.

"These are sailing ships," said Ald. Brian Smith. "there is a view between the masts. What difference would it make if there were no clear view?"

Bikes Bulge Police Shed

So many ownerless bicycles have turned up since the last annual police sale of such bikes last fall that all the storage space is used up, Victoria police quartermaster Sgt. James Smith said Tuesday.

He asked anyone who has lost a bicycle since October to help solve the problem. Persons who have reported lost bicycles in that period should report at the main desk in the police station at 625 Fisgard.

Sgt. Smith said anyone who had lost a bicycle but had not reported the loss could also check. He said there are about 50 bikes in the police storage shed.

White Man's World

Thick Skin Needed By Indians

OTTAWA (CP) — Success in the white man's world for North American native peoples requires a thick skin and the habit of forcing one's way despite discrimination, the Senate poverty committee was told Tuesday.

Lang

But, added Rev. Adam Cuthand of Winnipeg, the individual also needs to be able to accept himself and to possess an unshakeable religious conviction.

"Those have been guiding principles for me," said the pastor who is an Indian and co-ordinator of Indian and Metis work in the Anglican diocese of Rupert's Land.

VALUES IGNORED

His remarks came as a delegation of native leaders attempted to explain to the senators what it means to grow up an Indian in a society that they said fails to recognize any of one's basic cultural values.

The senators were curious about what keeps Indians in poverty and how some Indians have managed to escape from it. Walter Currie, president of the Indian-Eskimo Association of Canada, said native people have been offered little or no choice, especially if they are railroaded into integration with white society.

'BOTH WAYS'

When an Indian child is placed in a white man's school, Currie said, the arrows all point in one direction. "Everything says to him become a brown-skinned white man.

"We need arrows pointing both ways."

Currie, Walter Dieter of the National Indian Brotherhood and Dave Courchene of the Manitoba Indian Brotherhood told the committee that Canada's approach to integration of its native peoples lags far behind that in Scandinavian countries, Mexico and even parts of the United States.

OWN LANGUAGE

Indian children should be taught in their own language by teachers who know the language and using textbooks written in the language.

The problem of poverty will continue for Indians, Currie said, "until we can send out kids who are secure in themselves, who know who they are, who can say "'I am a Cree" or "I am an Ojibway" and who can stand up straight—that child will go ahead."

A brief presented by the group stated that poverty has its roots in the failure of the reserve system which turned into a series of rural ghettoes.

Wheat

Trade Share Shrunk

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's share of the world wheat market has shrunk in the past year and a half because of an unsuccessful government attempt to win an international price agreement among producers, Otto Lang, minister responsible for the Canada wheat board, told the Commons Tuesday.

★ ★ ★

Had the effort been successful, Lang said, farmers now would be guaranteed a minimum price for their grain.

The minister made the statement following a series of questions by Conservative MPs, led by former prime minister John Diefenbaker.

Diefenbaker asked why the Canadian share of the wheat market has dropped to 17 per cent from 28 per cent in the last two years.

Senate Hearing

Universities' Editors Rap Controls

OTTAWA (CP) — The Senate media inquiry Tuesday heard university student press editors complain about advertising censorship, administrative interference, press freedom and the perils of over politicization.

Allan Scarth, editor of the University of Alberta's Gateways passed around an anti-war cartoon that the university administration wouldn't let him print.

Originally printed in the University of British Columbia paper, it showed a naked man labelled U.S.A. raping a woman labelled Vietnam.

Scarth said his paper fought the decision but got nowhere on the issue which was over student control of the press. He said the case showed the state of freedom of the university student press.

Under questioning, Scarth said he would not resign over the issue. Senator Louis Beaubien (PC—Beaubien), one of the six out of 15 members of the special Senate committee on mass media who attended the hearing, thought the cartoon "disgusting."

Scarth said he wanted to print it partly because it portrayed a strongly brutal war in the same way. Nothing could be obscene enought to depict the obscenity of the Vietnam war.

★ ★ ★

David Chenoweth, editor of the McGill Daily, said he failed to see how the cartoon could damage "any sweet young lady" on campus. If a student was offended, she could protest or quit reading the paper.

Scarth said that as editor, appointed by the university student council, he felt he had the right to print anything he wants short of libel as long as it is in the public interest.

Censorship Barred By Judge

BOSTON (UPI) — A federal judge has ruled that state college presidents may not censor student newspapers.

U.S. District Court Judge Arthur Garrity, in a decision disclosed Monday, ruled in a case involving an article by Eldridge Cleaver, information minister of the Black Panther party. The article contained allegedly obscene words.

Dr. James Hammond, president of Fitchburg State College, had tried to censor The Cycle, the student newspaper, when he learned it planned to print the article.

Hammond said Monday he was "amazed" at the judge's decision.

The judge said that "having fostered a campus newspaper, the state may not impose arbitrary restrictions on the matter to be communicated. Students may not be confined to the expression of those sentiments that are officially approved."

Fog Piles 50 Cars On Bridge

VANCOUVER (CP) — More than 50 vehicles were involved Tuesday in chain-reaction collisions on the Port Mann Bridge, about 15 miles east of Vancouver, as fog covered low lying areas of the Lower Mainland for the third straight day.

Leakage from Tanker Reduced

ARICHAT, N.S. (CP) — Oil leakage into Chedabucto Bay on Nova Scotia's east coast was minimal Tuesday as officials sought to get rid of the pollution source, the Liberian tanker broken and grounded on a rock just off the coast.

Harvey Clare of Toronto, environmental protection co-ordinator for Imperial Oil Ltd., said the oil was bubbling slowly from the tanker, but not nearly as profusely as it had done the first few days after the 11,379-ton Arrow grounded Wednesday.

Winds switched from northerly to southeasterly Tuesday afternoon and there were fears that this would push the major oil slick back across the bay. The oil now stretches along an 11-mile section of the bay's southern shore. Winds are forecast to reach 40 miles an hour late today.

Clare said the stern section of the tanker, containing about one-third of the vessel's 3,800,000-gallon cargo, could be pulled from the rock and towed to safety when wind and sea conditions are right.

Officials plan to fill the front tanks with compressed air to provide buoyancy and then tow it to a sheltered cove. There it could be "boomed-off" to contain oil should there be any leakage.

The forward section, containing between 1,000,000 and 1,500,000 gallons, cannot be moved. Clare said the options are to burn it or let it off in controlled leaks so that it would drift out to sea.

'No Borders' in Battle

OTTAWA (UPI) — Canada and the United States should "abolish the border" and work together in the war on pollution, said a member of a U.S. Congressional science committee meeting with their Canadian counterparts Tuesday.

Rep. James Fulton, a Pennsylvania Republican, said pollution was one of the important problems common to both countries.

Board Will Decide

Complaints of "deplorable" conditions at Oak Bay's Monterey elementary school will be examined by the B.C. education department but Education Minister Donald Brothers could not say Tuesday how long the municipality would have to wait for some kind of an answer.

★ ★ ★

In an interview, Mr. Brothers said he was unfamiliar with the school's problems, but gave his assurance that they would be considered before his department presents classroom needs to the provincial treasury board.

The decision on what schools are deserving will be made by the board, he said.

Asked how long the department report and treasury board approval might take, he said: "How long's a string? I'm doing the best I can."

Oak Bay council voiced anger Monday night about reports of out-dated, unsanitary washroom facilities, an inadequate heating plant and potential fire hazards at the school. It agreed to begin putting pressure on the education department in the hope that funds would be released for construction of a permanent annex.

The annex was approved in a 1966 referendum.

Campbell on Pollution:

Public Must Join Fight

Government action against pollution must be backed by many individual decisions to join the fight, Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell said Tuesday.

"Every day there are a number of housewives making personal decisions about those laundry detergents," the minister told approximately 80 members of the Kiwanis Club of Victoria in the Empress Hotel.

Disposal of non-returnable bottles, litter in parks and roadside garbage were all matters where the individual could help decide the outcome of the anti-pollution fight, he said.

Mr. Campbell also said that forthcoming legislation would eliminate the traditional arrangement allowing a company or municipality to pollute to a certain extent, regardless of the result.

The recent throne speech said that the government would enforce air quality standards announced last year.

Mr. Campbell said that in future, "technological permits" would be issued, keyed to changing circumstances.

"It's going to apply to such things as devices which might become mandatory on autos," he said.

Mr. Campbell recalled that when discussions were held with the city of Nelson concerning its dumping of raw sewage into the Kootenay River, Nelson produced a permit issued in 1919.

"That is taking absurdity to the ultimate goalpost," he said.

However, he added, it was "typical" of the attitude of both municipalities and companies which feel they have the right to pollute on the basis of a permit or precedent.

"The person responsible for pollution at the point of discharge should be absolutely responsible for the cost," Mr. Campbell declared.

He cited New Westminster, which for years has been discharging raw sewage into the Fraser.

He also supported regional government as a means of cleaning up the environment.

"You can't sewer Greater Victoria at all if you take it on a compartmentalized basis," said the minister.

Outer Districts' Reaction

Health Board Cut Merits 'Boycott'

Victoria should be commercially boycotted by all surrounding municipalities if it pulls out its money and staff and wrecks the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health, members of the Sooke school board were told Tuesday.

Trustee Mrs. Isabelle Reader said that the city forgets that it depends to a large degree for its survival on the municipal and electoral areas with which it is surrounded and that it was grossly unfair for it to threaten to wreck the health board and so eliminate health services for schools in the district.

The outburst was precipitated by a report from trustee Ronald Fitton who said he had attended a meeting earlier Tuesday at which the serious situation was discussed. Another such meeting was scheduled for Thursday, he said.

The meeting achieved little, trustee Fitton said.

Mrs. Reader said it was obvious Victoria was trying to force regionalization of the health services in the district and that she was in sympathy with the aim but the city was going about it in the wrong way.

"We resent having our children being used as a threat in this issue," Mrs. Reader said.

The regionalization concept was unanimously endorsed at a Feb. 4 meeting which was attended by representatives of all district municipalities and electoral areas who met with capital region MLAs.

At that time it was pointed out that the health board was maintained mostly by Victoria, Oak Bay and Esquimalt which each paid a per capita levy of approximately $2.50 or more for its maintenance while Saanich and electoral areas were charged 30 cents a head.

This was true, said Mrs. Reader Tuesday, but it was forgotten that the municipalities are receiving a provincial per capita grant of $30 while the electoral areas receive nothing.

Evidence of the fact that Victoria was leaning on the outlying areas for its very existence, said Mrs. Reader, was the frantic effort it was making to draw people into its commercial area — to make it the financial and commercial hub of the whole district.

Mr. Fitton said he thought the matter would eventually be resolved over the discussion table, and did not think Sooke district would be left without health services.

Loyalty Vows: No Comment

Msgr. M. T. O'Connell of St. Andrew's Roman Catholic Cathedral said Tuesday he had not seen a letter from Rome with instructions that priests should publicly reaffirm the vows of celibacy and obedience once a year on Maundy Thursday, the Thursday before Easter and therefore could not comment on it. Bishop Remi De Roo is on a speaking tour in the U.S.

Island Case Found

By DIANE JANOWSKI

Confirmation of a new case of a kind of typhoid on the Tsartlip Indian reserve in Central Saanich — probably contracted through use of an outdoor privy — was blamed by band council Tuesday on lack of awareness of the seriousness of Indian health problems.

The case, which band spokesmen said was confirmed Monday by a provincial health inspector who called the disease a kind of typhoid, occurred in a woman.

The disease is caused by salmonella bacteria.

Chief Philip Paul would not identify the inspector or the sick woman, but said the health inspector had advised him of the situation by telephone and said it was out of his (the inspector's) jurisdiction, but the family should be warned the disease could be passed on. The disease is commonly called salmonella.

Chief Paul said the telephone call was the first indication the band had that that there was salmonella on the reserve.

Chief Paul said when he approached Mrs. T. L. Ambrose, provincial public health nurse for the area, she declined to tell him how the disease had been discovered, but said it was probably contracted through the use of an outdoor privy.

Of the 43 homes on the Tsartlip reserve, only seven have indoor plumbing. There are about 270 residents on the reserve.

Chief Paul said Mrs. Ambrose told him the disease could be a serious threat to the reserve community and said there had been similar cases in two or three other reserve families since September.

Chief Paul said, "We don't know how many cases of this nature could have arisen in the past on the Saanich peninsula because our doctor has been reluctant to release this sort of information.

Mrs. Ambrose told the chief the disease, which induces diarrhea and weakens the victim, can be passed along through cooking utensils.

Chief Paul said she told him that persons suffering from the disease must be under a doctor's care and indicated it could become serious enough to require hospitalization. The reserve victim is not in hospital.

Chief Paul said he has asked the provincial health inspector to check the water supply of the community as well as that of the reserve school.

Secrecy Major Decision For Drugs Counsellors

By PAT MURPHY

Just what policy does a teacher follow when he talks with a student who is taking drugs?

This is a question which will soon be faced by the members of the Greater Victoria school board and, as a guideline, members will consider a statement briefly introduced but not studied Monday at a meeting of the board's education committee—a committee which includes all of the trustees.

The statement was prepared by the Narcotics Addiction Foundation of British Columbia. Copies were distributed among board members so they could study it and think about it at their leisure. It was presented by the board's special education services director E. G. Callbeck.

Mr. Callbeck said the document at that point was not for general consumption, and he cautioned that it should probably be held for discussion by the school board before being dealt with in the press.

However, copies of the document were circulated to reporters, and no prohibition was placed on its use by the education committee.

The document is couched in general terms and may need interpretation before board members can pin down specific topics for discussion.

In a preamble it points out there was no specific or overall policy "concerning the course of action to be taken when a student was involved in a drug dependency situation during the period he is under the jurisdiction of the school authorities."

It was important, the guide continues, that the board should have a policy and that it should have liaison with the Children's Aid Society, law enforcement authorities and treatment clinics.

School staffs should know about referral procedures and in addition, students themselves should have some knowledge of the "ground rules," the guides suggests.

There were a number of factors involved, including responsibility to the school where other students could be affected, to the parents who should know what was going on and to law enforcement agencies where illegal activity, and especially trafficking, was taking place on school property.

There were various opinions, the guide points out, on "confidentiality" in school counselling.

The counsellor should not promise secrecy until he had decided on a course of action. If he did he might be hamstrung when it came to finding a solution. Secrecy could not always be maintained, and a desire to maintain it could work to the disadvantage of the student, school or parents.

In some instances, the guide points out, the counsellor might find that the drug user was reluctant to admit that he had a problem or that the use of drugs was a byproduct of some deeper problem.

A negative or moralistic attitude on the part of the interviewer might be met by an equally negative attitude on the part of the student, the guide observes, and little could be accomplished.

Admitting that many of the observations were nebulous and unsubstantiated, the guide points out that a serious attempt should be made to glean as much information as possible on drugs and their use in a detached way.

"Drug use is not an isolated occurrence and is often associated with disillusionment, perception of hypocrisy, rejection of adult norms and behaviour," the guide said.

Initials Gather

CAPITAL Idea

The POETs are doing their thing, and the COSYs, SPOTs and even the OBYCs are invited.

That reads like a gathering of bureaucrats or a convention of soupmakers, but it is actually the way the POETs (Police Organization of Esquimalt Teens) Tuesday announced an annual swim and dance.

The event is in the Crystal Garden from 8 p.m. to midnight Friday, with music by the Peace Jeep and admission at the door—and the invitation was to members of Victoria's City Organization Supporting Youth (COSY), the Saanich Police Organization of Teens (SPOT) and the Oak Bay Youth Council (OBYC).

Spokesmen for the year-old Esquimalt organization added that any teenagers in Greater Victoria are welcome, whether they belong to an initialled organization or just have initials all their own.

Dockers Seal Ballot Boxes For Single Contract Count

Longshoremen in Victoria, Chemainus and Port Albernia are among 3,200 who vote on a fourth contract settlement proposal in six British Columbia ports today and Thursday and union officials are taking no chances that leaks will occur.

Ballot boxes will remain sealed, no matter how quickly the vote is taken in any area, until the 6 p.m. PST deadline Thursday, when counting will begin.

In three previous votes, results from some areas were made public while members of other locals were voting. Union officials said this could have influenced voting.

Longshoremen turned the last offer down by a vote of 51 per cent a week ago. The latest proposal was worked out during the weekend under threat of federal intervention.

Dockers in Chemainus, Victoria and Port Alberni met Tuesday to discuss latest terms and Vancouver and New Westminsters members meet today.

The current offer remains at a $1.15 hourly increase over three years on a base rate of $3.88, but changes in work rule and work guarantee provisions have been made. Exact terms have not been released.

Mundy Best Toastmaster

Keith Mundy, 131 South Turner, one of five competing speakers, took top honors in the Victoria Beaver Toastmasters club 15th annual speech contest held at the Chinese Village restaurant this week.

Mr. Mundy will represent Beaver toastmasters in the area speakoff to be held in Victoria March 31.

City Doctor Honored

Dr. Donald A. Gaudin, 1175 Cook, has been inducted as a Fellow of the American Academy of Orthopaedic Surgeons. Dr. Gaudin was one of 506 Fellows inducted at the academy's 37th annual meeting in Chicago recently. The academy is the largest medical organization for specialists in bone and joint surgery.

Department Spokesman Cites Differing Views

Indian Meeting's Problems 'Misunderstandings'

An Indian Affairs department public relations officer said Tuesday that most of the problems that have arisen at the regional band managers' conference being held in Victoria are probably due to "misunderstandings."

"I'm certainly not calling them (band managers) liars," said Bob Williams in a telephone interview from Vancouver. "They may not be misleading you; they may be speaking from a different point of view."

Mr. Williams said he considered some charges made last week by delegates to the conference to be erroneous.

★ ★ ★

Speaking of the charge that a resource person who had been expected from Ottawa for the first day's meeting did not appear, he said, "I think the one you're referring to is John Nichols.

Asked whether or not these persons usually advised those who had invited them that they would not be appearing, Mr. Williams said, "I would presume so."

He said he knew nothing about a charge by delegates that the speaker not only failed to appear, but did not advise them of his intention until a letter was received two days after he had been expected.

Speaking of another charge that delegates had been promised they would be paid for travelling time, but had not been, Mr. Williams said, "I was told yesterday (Monday) that Mr. Stelkia had been paid for his travelling time."

★ ★ ★

Chief Jim Stelkia of Oliver, near Penticton, had been mentioned in this respect in a Saturday morning news story, although several of the delegates had complained of the same problem.

Mr. Williams said he had not questioned whether or not anyone else had been paid for the travelling time.

Tom Sampson, band manager for the Tsartlip reserve near Victoria and one of the conference's organizers, said he had been advised Tuesday that Chief Stelkia would be receiving the travelling time allotment Wednesday.

"You can't blame him (Williams) for wanting to cover up for the department," he said.

Another complaint voiced by the delegates had been that information prepared by the Indian organizers had not been distributed by the department, as it was to have been.

"I'm just saying that those pieces of information supposedly prepared by them to be sent out by the department were not known at the department," said Mr. Williams.

He said responsibility for distributing the information lay with the Institute of Adult Studies, where the conference is being held by representatives of 41 of the more than 188 Indian bands in B.C. and the Yukon.

J. O. Boyd, of the institute, who had been involved in the preparatory work for the conference, said: "I have no idea what they (band managers and Indian Affairs department) are referring too. I think you'd have to get us all together at one time to find out what it is."

Mr. Williams said it was difficult to reply to the delegates' charge that they were not being given definite replies to questions because the department is in a state of flux while the white paper is being implemented.

★ ★ ★

"That is a subjective thing," he said, "and I guess a lot of questions asked would be difficult to answer because there are a lot of changes being made."

He said the delegates had not followed the agenda prepared for the conference.

Three Opinions

On Abortion

By HELEN MORRIS

Victoria psychiatrist Dr. Leyda Lythgoe regularly interviews adult products of unwanted pregnancies — people who spent their childhoods falling from beating to beating, and who beat their own children because they don't know another way.

Abuses Cited

Another local woman doctor interview agreed that, for the health of both child and mother, abortion laws must be more flexible. But a third female doctor sees abuses outweighing the social benefits of legalized abortion.

Dr. Lythgoe is married, but has no children. She said:

"People do to their children automatically what was done to them. For instance, what's going to happen to a child if it's born into a home where it's a hated child of psychotic parents? There are right now two battered babies (in a local institution)."

"A girl with an IQ of 20 can't protect herself against smarter people. Anyone who comes into the house can make her pregnant."

"Or a 45-year-old woman whose husband impregnates her in her sleep ... The other children of the family are grown up. Now she may or may not want that baby. And if she doesn't want the child it's going to have a miserable life."

Self-Abortion

"Capital punishment has never been a deterrent to murder. The law doesn't prevent people from seeking illegal abortion."

And a desperate woman may even try self-abortion, Dr. Lythgoe said.

She would like to see more legal abortions performed. She does not suggest abortion on demand, where a woman could get an abortion by simply stating she wants one, but would prefer a modification of the present system of abortion on the recommendation of a committee, but with "a broader base of indications" — with more criteria justifying legal abortion.

Abortion committees should be widened to include people from "other professions (than the medical) such as a social worker who can present the social implications on unwanted children being born." Dr. Lythgoe would include, too, "responsible lay people" — perhaps a female Member of Parliament, or of the legislature on such committees.

Advice Needed

But no woman, she feels, should make the decision to abort alone.

"That's a power that no one human is fit to decide — matters of life and death.

Victoria area general practitioner Dr. Margaret Marsh, a mother of four, thought that either "the law should be rendered more flexible so that doctors and hospital committees can make more flexible decisions," or that the law should be removed from the books:

"I don't see why the law should have anything to say about this at all. I think the laws are reflecting church laws of long, long ago and the laws are far behind human need.

Desperate Pleas

"Women are coming to me in desperate situations requesting abortion and I'm unable to use the training provided me to help them."

But she agrees with Dr. Lythgoe that a woman should not make the decision to have an abortion without consultation:

"I don't relish the idea of doing an abortion. If I can find some other solution to her social and personal problems. I want to. But I can't immediately think of anyone who requested an abortion of me that I didn't think deserved one.

"Women take this seriously themselves.

On Conscience

"If her church doesn't allow abortion, she won't come ... This is a matter of conscience not a matter of law. This is in people's heads. They don't do or not do because of the law."

A woman "does," Dr. Marsh thinks because her relations with her husband are not good — he may be an alcoholic; he may hate children. A woman "does" because she simply cannot support another child — she may not even be able to afford a temporary absence from the job she works at to support the children she already has while she has another child.

A woman "does" because she is desperate. "I do not feel that women take these things lightly."

"How much suffering is there supposed to be for one mistake?"

Another Victoria area general practitioner, a mother of three who declined to allow her name to be published thinks abortion is the less beautiful answer — "When you've seen an abortion in the operating room — spontaneous, of course — I don't know. There's a bag with a human being it it. It doesn't have to be very big and it moves — it's human. It falls into a bucket and you leave it there."

She would consider abortion only in very rare cases — rape, severe illness of the mother, or when there is almost certain risk of the fetus being born defective.

'Abuse Certain'

"There is a certainty of a great deal of abuse if abortion is legalized. It would lead to promiscuity and indiscriminate indulgence in sex when a little thinking about it ahead of time wouldn't hurt.

"I'm in principle against abortion when we have contraceptives in various forms (including sterilization) that are available to anybody and everybody."

She thinks that abortion without very great cause would damage the mother psychologically, as she would be reversing the natural creative life process. And a society which permitted such reversals indiscriminantly would risk becoming a corrupt and negative society, she said.

Lesser Evil

"The relatively few children that would be born unwanted (with proper use of preventative measures) would be a much lesser evil than the unknown danger of legalized abortion."

Psychiatrist Dr. Lythgoe disagrees.

She thinks that, although this generation of women and of society may suffer emotional after-effects from abortion, it may be possible that changing attitudes towards abortions, brought about by treating it as a medical, rather than moral problem, will remove emotional kickback from future generations.

"People are still operating on attitudes instead of facts. Most of what we think and do, we consider a result of our intellect — but that's one-tenth of the iceberg. The rest is the engine underneath.

"We have to become aware of the unconscious causes of our actions.

"We have to learn to look at today's realities from all aspects."

Women May Probe Space But There Are Problems

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — Woman may share man's exploration of the planets, a space doctor said Monday. But extensive tests are needed to determine that she doesn't create more problems than she solves.

Dr. Charles Berry, chief doctor for the United States astronauts, said:

"I think it would definitely be more comfortable if we took women along," on long flights such as a two-year mission to Mars.

"It's a more comfortable way of life and one that's more normal," he said. But he said much study must be made to prove there is more psychological value in having women along than in going without them.

"How are you going to work it out!," he asked. "I doubt seriously that we'll get to the point in our country that we'll try to match up people.

"But then again, you don't want to have just one woman among a lot of men. You may create a problem then."

Berry said there is no definite plan at this time to include women on any flights but that the issue probably will be studied.

Berry made the remarks in an interview after delivering the keynote address Monday opening a three-day seminar at the Air Force School of Aerospace Medicine in San Antonio.

An Egg Shampoo Works Wonders

By MARY SUE MILLER

Somebody asks: What is the value of an egg shampoo? Is it true that one can be whipped up in the kitchen? How?

The Answer: Eggs are loaded with protein and vitamin A. Both of those elements have been found effective in the care of hair. Actually, hair is largely comprised of protein. Coatings, externally applied, work to prevent breakage of hair shafts. Like the facial complexion, the scalp welcomes applications of vitamin A.

In any case, egg shampoos are not a new idea. Ladies used them way-back-when for the life and sheen supplied thereby to the hair. In those days, of course, you concocted your own. Today there are several good brands to be had.

This is how to make your own: Beat the yolks and whites of two eggs separately; whip the whites to a froth and fold into the yolks. Wet the head with tepid water—hot water cooks the eggs into your hair and that creates a horrendous problem.

Now blot the hair with a terry towel, then massage half the mixture into your scalp and hair. Rinse with cool water and apply the rest of the mixture. Rinse again and again. Dry as usual.

You might give the idea of eating an egg a day a whirl. That way, proteins get to the root of the matter.

Psychiatry Slot Aids Children

TORONTO (CP)—Child psychiatry, which for years has been considered as an afterthought to adult services, is finally coming into its own, says Dr. Quentin Rae-Grant, professor of child psychiatry at the University of Toronto. He says the children's services were pushed into a slot in the adult service mechanism.

Life Quiet, Guarded For the Trumans

By MARGARET RICHARDS

INDEPENDENCE, Mo. (UPI) — Bess Wallace Truman will mark her 85th birthday Friday, devoting most of that day, like all others, to her husband.

No party is planned, but Mrs. Truman "never was overfond of big celebrations anyway," as one friend put it.

There probably will be a call from daughter Margaret, now Mrs. Clifton Daniel of New York City, and there certainly will be flowers. Otherwise, friends said, the birthday anniversary will stick to the increasingly slower-paced but happy routine that former president Harry S. Truman, also 85, has followed for several years.

Friends say Bess and Harry Truman need no close companionship except each other.

"Bess never was the kind who ran over to your house unannounced for a cup of coffee or expected you at hers," one said, "but she's the sort who is right there when you need her, with some little gift in time of trouble when she can't come herself."

Since Truman fell several years ago while his wife was away, she never leaves him in the evening and even daytime hours are spent largely in smoothing his path.

Both get up early. Often Truman is first downstairs and has retrieved the morning newspaper from the front yard by the time his wife comes down to fix breakfast.

In the early afternoon the "hired girl" arrives to tidy up and prepare the evening meal.

If his wife's birthday follows normal routine and weather is pleasant, Truman may take a morning stroll with his companion, sometime chauffeur and longtime friend, Mike Westwood of the Independence police department.

Mrs. Truman, an omniverous reader favoring whodunits, visits the library about once a week to return an armload of books and check out another batch.

Nights, the Trumans customarily go into the library, a small room. Fellow townsfolk bound homeward at day's end see Mrs. Truman "regularly as the calendar," reading beside a window in the light of a table lamp.

They are alone in the high-ceilinged house but help is never farther away than the Truman yard, if it should be needed.

Dawn, Sore Feet

DOROTHY WROTNOWSKI

There is only one thing I don't appreciate about travelling by any mode of transportation and that is that arrival times are so often at early morning hours. Most people like this, but to me about noon would be an ideal time.

Like the other morning aboard the Arcadia coming into San Francisco. We had to be on show for immigration at 7 a.m. — the ship was sailing under the Golden Gate bridge at this time.

Immigration formalities over, we had a leisurely breakfast—the food aboard ship was superb—Betty O'Keefe of Public and Industrial Relations told us we would be leaving the ship at 10:30 a.m. and would be going for a drive before lunch.

So, with the impression that we might be driving around most of the day I decided to take a turn around the deck. The morning was so beautiful—sunny and warm—I actually went around four times. This I thoroughly enjoyed at the time but lived to regret by late afternoon.

To what lengths will people go in the name of publicity? Down on the dock celebrating the arrival of the ship there was a bar set up on a cargo pallet lifted by a forklift.

Pretty Pat Feeney was mixing drinks for press, radio and television people down to meet the ship. But that's not all.

The ice, a great mound of it, had been flown in from Alaska that morning. It was ice from Mendenhall Glacier in Alaska which Arcadia cruise passengers will have the opportunity of visiting this year. It is claimed that glacier ice lasts four times longer than refrigerator cubes.

A ghastly thing happened to me at lunchtime. Troy Garrison, P & O public relations director had asked us to meet him at the Fairmont Hotel, which we did. Met in one of the lounges for a before-lunch drink and were told we were lunching on the roof from where the view was really something. Fine, sounded like fun.

We all trooped along to the elevator—I happened to be one of the last on. The doors had slid silently shut before I realized to my absolute horror that I was trapped in one of those glass cages that slowly creep up on the outside of the building—and we were going up 21 stories.

Much to the amusement of the others, I stoically stared at the solid wall. A teenage boy on the elevator who kept pleading with me to turn and look acted as a saving nuisance value.

By the time we had reached the roof I had become frozen—lost all personal identity and couldn't even think. And I don't suffer from vertigo. God only knows how welcome the sound of the doors sliding open was to me.

At the table Troy turned to me to ask if I would like a drink. Would I—when I have to go down again on that thing? I ordered a dry martini straight up—and during lunch it might be said I didn't drink the wine, I quaffed it. Anything to anaesthetize my feelings.

Normally drinks at lunch would make me sleepy, but this time all they did was sharpen my senses.

The lunch was glorious—buffet style. It had so many luscious dishes it is hard to describe. But I do know that when Troy brought back his plate—black Russian bread, a generous slab of interesting-looking cheese, a little cottage cheese and black olives as big as crabapples—it made the rest of us with plates piled high look as if we had never eaten before.

I'm not going to describe the trip down on the glass cage because I only know that when we were about three storeys up from the ground, life started to ooze slowly back again. At the bottom, Troy said, "Good show, Dorothy" and I thought for a split second that he thought I was putting it on. But I guess he meant that he was thankful I hadn't embarrassed anyone.

After lunch it was a ride on a clanking cable car down to Fisherman's Wharf where we sauntered around for a couple of hours. Then sat in the sun and drank plain pink lemonade and watched the pigeons.

A picture I won't forget down on Fisherman's Wharf was made by one of our own group, Alan Daniels of Vancouver.

Alan is six feet, seven inches tall and this slim giant with a shaggy blond head simply couldn't slow his steps to our rate. So there he was — slowly for him — about 10 feet ahead, twirling an umbrella in the bright sunshine obviously oblivious to the stares. Only an Englishman could do that.

Back to the cable car and up to Union Square where we did the shops, both window shopping and inside. Robin Lee, a 22-year-old from Calgary and Betty O'Keefe were both complaining of aching feet and legs. And I thought of the four turns around the Arcadia in the morning as being slightly unnecessary.

I had intended to buy a pair of shoes but decided against it. Knew if I ever got off my feet the chances were I wouldn't make it up again.

We walked to the air terminal thinking it was only a short distance but those blocks were awfully long. At the airport we revived a little and on the Western Airlines plane, after dinner it seemed no time at all until we were back in Vancouver.

Don't forget the Arcadia will be making southern as well as northern cruises starting in May.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: That lady in Michigan who didn't like your meat loaf recipe should have her head examined. First of all, ony a moron would try out a new recipe on guests. I want you to know I made it for my family the day I saw it in The Salt Lake Tribune and everyone said it was the best meat loaf they ever ate. I have orders to make it again next week.—Love You.

Dear Love: Please read on. It seems I started something:

□

Dear Ann Landers: Your meat loaf is delicious. I tried it yesterday and my poker club raved about it. I left off the bacon. My mother-in-law lives with us and I keep kosher. If you have a good recipe for beet borsht I'd like to have it. — Miami Beach.

Dear Mi.: I'm going to quit while I'm ahead. Read on.

□

Dear Ann: I never measure anything and I hate recipes. But I tried your meat loaf and it was wonderful. That lady in Detroit who said her dog wouldn't eat it made me mad. I gave your meat loat to our dog and he cleaned the plate and cried for more. — Sioux Falls.

□

Dear Ann Landers: About your meat loaf: It is terrific. We don't have a dog but I gave some to our cat. She ate every bit of it.

□

Dear Ann: That meat loaf recipe must have made you rich. You mentioned three brand names. Now you can retire and it's about time. — I Spy.

Dear Spy: Sorry to disappoint you but commercials are out of my line. And I have more bad news — I have no retirement plans.

□

Dear Ann: Your meat loaf recipe is good but it would be better if you used whipping cream instead of water. Also we don't like tomato sauce in our family so I used a can of mushroom soup instead. It was delicious. — Hartford.

Dear Hart: We don't need the extra calories and we do like tomato sauce in our family. but thanks for the suggestions.

Dear Ann: I have improved on your recipe by adding four hard-boiled eggs. I just shoved them into the meat loaf — nicely spaced so everyone would get at least part of one. It looks beautiful when you cut it. — Saskatoon.

Dear Sas: Sounds great. I'll try it.

Dear Ann: I read your column in Hong Kong. My cook cannot read English. Can you have that meat loaf recipe translated into Chinese? I realize this would put you to a lot of trouble but I see that your name was mentioned on the list of the most admired women in the world and this means you go out of your way to be outstanding and do unusual things. Thank you in advance. — Former Buffalo Reader.

Dear Buff: Sorry, but I'm not equipped to deal with Chinese translation. Try Madame Chiang Kai-shek. She was on the list, too.

Feminists:

Vatican View Ancient

TORONTO (UPI) — The case of a female German diplomat who was not allowed by the Roman Catholic hierarchy to join her country's Vatican embassy staff, could have "repercussions" for Canada should it wish to send a female diplomat to the Vatican.

Cecelia Wallace, a spokesman for the alliance, said Pope Paul refused to accredit Dr. Elizabeth Mueller because she was single, a possible complicating factor in social contacts with Vatican officials.

"This case has repercussions for Canada if it ever contemplates sending a woman to the Vatican," Miss Wallace said.

The alliance, which is trying to change the hierarchy's view of women, said Catholic seminaries teach clerics the "ancient views of women" as inferior to men mentally, morally and intellectually.

'Dearest Ros' Off Market

NEW YORK (AP) — Four old letters from Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis to former deputy defence secretary Roswell Gilpatric were slated for sale at auction March 12, but were withdrawn when Gilpatric said they were stolen, dealer Charles Hamilton, who has the letters, disclosed Tuesday.

Hamilton said the letters probaby would have brought anywhere from $2,000 to $4,000 if they had been auctioned as planned.

But, he said, he learned Monday that they might be stolen and telephoned Gilpatric, who verified that the letters had been taken from the files in his law office.

Washington Post columnist Maxine Cheshire quoted the latter letter as saying:

"Dearest Ros — I would have told you about the wedding before I left, but then everything happened so much more quickly than I'd planned.

"I saw somewhere what you had said about the announcement of my plans to wed Onassis and I was very touched. Dear Ros, I hope you know all you were and are and will be to me.

"With my love, Jackie."

Italiana Show Major Draw At Gallery

By BILL THOMAS

A change of government in Italy and a change of heart allowed a tobacco company to step in and buy a large collection of sculpture destined for the Soviet Union. The contemporary Italian works are touring Canada, and the show opened Tuesday at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria sponsored by Rothmans of Canada.

The exhibition was described to a large opening night audience by director Colin Graham as "the most important sculpture exhibition yet to be seen on Vancouver Island."

Scultura Italiana offers examples of work ranging from neo-classical to the most modern styles. It was originally assembled by the Italian collector and critic Gaspero del Corso in 1964 and 1965, and from him it passed to Rothmans.

It has been seen by over 1,000,000 people so far, and indications are that the show will break attendance records at the Victoria gallery.

The collection was designed to show as broad a spectrum as possible of the current trends in Italian sculpture—and it succeeds. It is certainly not the type of exhibition which might delight only the most knowledgeable, as the attendance figures alone show.

Traditionalists will probably find the portrait sculptures most appealing. Floriano Bodini is represented by a work titled The Wife of the Frenchman, which is reminiscent of Jacob Epstein. This is a stark work in bronze which, despite its strength, remains essentially feminine.

Emilion Greco, now teaching in Naples, is represented by a large head in bronze titled Olympia, which offers hints of the classical tradition but is still essentially modern in character.

The vitality of his style and also his versatility is amply demonstrated in Large Bather No. 4. This is a 68-inch tall female bikini-clad figure in total contrast to the angular quality of Olympia. Large Bather is feminine in a rather arrogant manner.

Author Henry Miller is the subject of a portrait in bronze by the sculptor and engraver Marino Marini. It has an immediate and vital quality that quite reflects the subject.

Moving toward a more abstract quality but still representational are the offerings of Giuditta Scalini. This artist is seen in a small collection of figures titled Dancers, The Friends, Mother and Son II, The Warrior, The Pole and Figure with Birds.

Arnaldo Pomodoro's Book of Signs in lead has suffered damage in transit but not so that it seriously spoils the work.

Rothmans vice-president, Peter Bone, said the company's collection of works by the French sculptor Rodin will also be displayed here in 1971.

The Italian show will continue to March 1 every day but Monday, when the gallery is closed.

Businessmen Under Bed

'Trash' Spoils Carols

The annual carol programs sung by elementary school children from Victoria City Hall are one of the most well-known features of Victoria's Christmas week.

But when a local radio station tapes the programs, cuts the tape up and uses pieces of it to space out "commercial garbage," it is another thing entirely.

The program was fragmented, he told members of the Greater Victoria School Board education committee Monday night, and interspersed with "garbage" so that Johnny's mother would be forced to listen to the "trash" to hear her little son sing a portion of Silent Night.

Well, said Trustee Allan McKinnon, the airways were filled with garbage anyway, and "it might as well be some of ours."

He felt that Mr. Bunn was putting too much stress on the whole thing. It was nice to hear the children's voices, but their singing was made possible by the message of businessmen. He did not look for a businessman every night under his bed and did not think they were trying to pervert the Christmas message, he said.

As a matter of policy, the committee will recommend that the school board pass a motion banning the performance of school musical groups for commercial ventures such as promotions by department stores, shopping centres, gas stations and professional and sporting events.

New Petunias

Tuesday I described some of the new seeds and plants which will be making their debut this spring. Today I think we might do a bit more browsing through the 1970 seed and nursery catalogues to take a look at the new models.

Probably the most popular of all our annual bedding plants is the petunia, and for a very good reason; it is one of the very few plants that remain in bloom all summer long. While there is already a good choice of colors and varieties, 1970 brings several new named kinds.

There is, for instance, a new grandiflora petunia called Pink Snow, in a delicate soft pink shade. El Toro, another grandiflora, has very large, frilly flowers in a bright red shade.

★ ★ ★

Sweet Bippy is a new double petunia in the grandiflora class with ruffled petals in rose and white, while Salmon Delight is another double in light salmon pink.

Still with the new petunias, Tiffany has very large and deeply ruffled flowers in soft salmon pink with a cream background.

Sparkles makes a dwarf, compact plant covering itself with smallish flowers in deep rose pink with a creamy gold throat. Especially good for planters and window boxes are the three new dwarf Mound petunias—White Mound, Blue Mound and Violet Mound.

About the best dwarf bedding plants we have for shaded locations is the Impatiens, which is an outdoor version of the beloved houseplant Busy Lizzie.

This year, seeds of Impatiens will be offered in a mixture called Crazy Quilt, flowering in scarlet, crimson, cherry, pink, orange and white.

We don't ordinarily think of the sunflower as a plant for the ornamental flower bed, as the edible-seeded kinds are too tall and the flower heads too big to mix with the other occupants.

Several years ago a dainty ornamental sunflower called Italian White made quite a stir in the horticultural world; this year there is a new one named Autumn Beauty, growing five feet tall and bearing dozens of five-inch flowers in combinations of yellow, bronze and red. The seeds that follow are very attractive to birds.

Plant scientists at the University of Minnesota have been working for some years now to develop a really good eating apple hardy enough to survive sub-zero winters.

This year they have succeeded in combining the size and flavor of the Golden Delicious apple with the hardiness of Haralson, a smallish prairie apple.

The new hybrid has been named Honeygold. Another, called Red Barton, is a cross between Golden Delicious and Red Duchess; this one is not only frost-resistant but is showing considerable resistance to the dreaded fireblight.

Stark Brothers of Missouri have struck out in a new direction in their apple-breeding program; they have attempted to improve the ornamental qualities of the apple tree without sacrificing fruit quality, in the hope of producing a dwarf tree pretty enough to be featured in the front lawn, yet bearing high-quality fruit.

Their entry this year is Stark Red Bouquet Delicious, which covers itself with beautiful red blossoms in spring, followed by glossy red fruits with Red Delicious flavor.

ARTHUR HOPPE

Depression Cure-All

Now that Mr. Nixon has produced his first budget, the experts are analyzing his economic policies. And it's becoming increasingly clear that he's embarked on a bold and courageous course to cure the Nation's ills.

In one fell swoop, Mr. Nixon hopes to lick the worries that most plague the average American—high prices, high taxes, pollution, overpopulation, the draft, urban sprawl and the weird conduct of our young.

It should be obvious to all by now that the President has brilliantly conceived and is daringly pushing forward the only possible solution to all these problems: Another depression.

No one is happier with this turn of events than that little band of militant do-gooders called The League to Bring Back the Depression.

For years, the League, whose motto is "Two Chickens in Every Garage," has been hopelessly bucking a rising tide of prosperity. But at a League rally the other night, victory was in the air.

"The Depression," Chairman Grufney Grommet told a wildly-cheering throng of middle-aged matrons and businessmen, "is just around the corner!"

"Yes, sir, look at the stock market," cried a balding banker elatedly. "Why it's '29 all over again."

"And unemployment's up again," said a portly manufacturer. "Pretty soon I'll be able to hang out a help wanted sign and a hundred men will line up, hats in hand."

★ ★ ★

"Just think," said a housewife, a nostalgic lump in her throat, "bread for ten cents a loaf, a first-run movie for a quarter."

"And don't forget taxes," said an elderly accountant. "Why in 1931 the whole national budget was only $3.5 billion. A man got to keep what he earned."

"We're overlooking the broad picture," said a sociologist. "Among the other benefits that will accrue are the elimination of the two-car family and a drastic decline in the birth rate—thus reducing smog and overpopulation by at least an X factor."

"And no draft," said a mother excitedly. "Imagine having an army of only 134,000 men again—all volunteers."

"As soon as we can no longer afford disposable bottles and throw-away plastic containers," said an engineer, "the garbage problem will be eliminated."

A bearded psychologist spoke up. "Best of all, a depression will close the generation gap," he said. "Instead of making revolutions, the young will be concerned solely, as we were, with making good."

"There's one problem a depression won't lick," said a orotchety gentleman in the rear. "And that's poverty."

"Perhaps not," said Chairman Grommet with a smile. "But at least the poor will no longer feel alone."

While all agreed with the sentiment, some felt an endorsement by the League wouldn't be favorably received by the White House. In fact, a few argued that it could scuttle Mr. Nixon's entire economic program.

★ ★ ★

"Nonsense," said Chairman Grommet. "Nothing can stop an idea whose time has come."

So the motion was adopted. The meeting adjourned with a rousing rendition of "Happy Days Are Almost Here Again." There wasn't a dry eye in the house.

SYDNEY HARRIS

On Homophones

A homophone is a word that is pronounced the same as another, but differs in spelling or meaning, like "pair" and "pear" and "pare." There are many of these in the English language, and in most cases the wrong word is written for the right one.

Even so literate a journal as the New York Review of Books, in a large headline offering special holiday subscriptions, wrote "Christmas Doesn't Phase Me," when the word it meant was "faze." It is a common error; most people think "phase" is proper in this usage, and "faze" is only a slang variant, but they are totally different words.

The New York Times, which also should know better, not long ago reported in a story that a person was "hailed into court." The homophone that should have been used is "haled," which means "drawn by force." To be "hailed" into court is to be shouted for, which was not meant. Yet "hailed" has almost driven out "haled" in this kind of context.

Recently I read a story in which one character was described as being "hair-brained." This is a common homophonic mistakes for "hare-brained," which means giddy or nutty behavior, which as associated with the March hare and other rabbits that seem to go wild in some seasons. The notion of "hair" has nothing whatever to do with the case.

Every language has such problems. Cinderella's famous "glass" slipper is the result of homophonic mistake in French. The original title of Perrault's Cinderella was La Petite Pantoufle de Vair, or "The Little Fur Slipper," but the sound of "vair" was confused with "verre," meaning glass, and the mistake is now ineradicable.

But English is especially burdened with this problem. Some 50 years ago, Robert Bridges, the poet and scholar, wrote an essay in English homophones with a list of 835 entries involving nearly 1,800 words. These words are troublesome and self-destructive; also, because we are careless in speech and smudge the vowels, words originally different begin to sound alike, and we lose important distinctions.

Almost everyone calls it "Welsh rarebit," when it should be "Welsh rabbit"; all children refer to "cole Slaw" as "cold slaw," and I have seen it printed as such on some menus; "buttonhold" long ago lost out to "buttonhole"; "sweetheart" has nothing to do with the "heart," but is a corruption of "sweetard," like "dotard" and "coward."

★ ★ ★

If I recall my Alice correctly, it was the Gryphon who remarked that school-hours in the sea grew shorter every day. "That's why they're called 'lessons,'" you know," he said to Alice, "because they lessen each day." Alice knew there was something wrong with this explanation, but a 7-year-old girl can hardly handle a homophone.

Tailor to the Stars

SHEILAH GRAHAM

The most popular man in London today, sartorially speaking, is a 35-year-old tailor, Douglas Hayward. He now is also a restaurateur with the Earl of Lichfield and eight other partners (including Michael Caine.) I found Doug, as everyone calls him, in his restaurant.

"How did it all start?" I asked Hayward, who was wearing a bright orange vest, the rest grey. (When you dress men like Sir Laurence Olivier, Peter Sellers, Ringo Starr, Paul McCartney, Richard Harris, Albert Finney, etc., etc., you must have the tact of an angel and the determination of the devil.)

"I left school when I was 15," he replied. (So many successful men and women have started their careers from a poor beginning that it makes you wonder sometimes about higher education.)

"I was an apprentice to a tailor in Savile Row, Mayfair, 20 years ago. I picked up pins and ran for cheese rolls. I earned 27 shillings a week ($3.24). A little more than half went for my fare and I gave my mother 10 shillings ($1.20) a week. So I had two shillings to myself (24 cents).

"I had to take work home to earn some extra money. I learned in four years what you are supposed to learn in six. There was one aspect I didn't learn then — how to cut the cloth for suits. So I went to a cutting school and left to learn the management side of tailoring. When I was 28 — my apprenticeship had lasted 13 years — I started on my own. I was ready."

He did not have a shop. He travelled to see the prospective clients in their homes. He had met Terence Stamp at a party. And he kept an appointment to see Terry in Jimmy Woolf's (the late producer) apartment in Mayfair. Jimmy had his own tailor but when Terence ordered four suits, Jimmy promptly ordered eight — he wasn't going to be beaten by an actor. Then Peter Sellers ordered eight suits and Hayward was on his way.

Now he has a showroom in Mayfair. It cost $65,000 with beautiful marble and elegant furnishings, plus 10 assistants and a workshop in Fulham where he employs 20 men to make the suits for his illustrious clients. And he no longer goes to their homes. They come to him.

He has made the suits for many of the present films. He was in charge of the clothes for Peter Sellers and Ringo Starr in The Magic Christian. He also dressed Nicol Williamson in The Reckoning.

9 IN MEMORIAM

ADAMS—In memory of a dear brother Shawn, who passed away February 11, 1967

Someone remembers, someone cares.
Your name is whispered in all our prayers;
A smile, a tear, a thought sincere
How often we wish that you were here
Always together in memory's land
Today, tomorrow, Always the same
Whereever we go, whatever we do,
Our thoughts, dear brother are always with you.
—Forever remembered by sisters Shirley and Grace.

ADAMS—In loving Memory of my son Shawn E. Adams. Who passed away Feb. 11th, 1967.
What would we give if we could say, Our SON is coming home today.
To hear his voice to see him smile, to sit and talk with him awhile, to be together in the same old way, would be our greatest wish today.
Dear Lord forgive a silent tear, a constant wish that he were here Other's are taken. Yes we know, But he was mine and I loved Him so.
—Always remembered by Ray Adams, Mrs. Helen Adams, and the Harris family.

ADAMS—In loving memory of Shawn Adams who passed away February 11, 1967.
Deep in our hearts you are fondly remembered
Sweet happy memories cling 'round your name;
True hearts that loved you with deepest affection.
Always will love you in death just the same
—Sadly missed, always remembered, Ken, Jean, Georgina and Darlene Harris.

ADAMS—In loving memory of my brother Shawn, who passed away February 11, 1967.
More and more each day I miss him,
Friends may think the wound is healed.
But little do they know the sorrow,
That lies within my heart concealed.
—Sadly missed, always remembered, Brother Ray.

ADAMS—In memory of Shawn, who left us on February 11, 1967
Thy day has come, not gone;
The sun has risen, not set;
Thy life is now beyond
The reach of death or change.
Not ended, but, begun.
O, Noble soul! O gentle heart!
Hail, and farewell.
—Sadly missd, George and Betty.

CHIASSON AND LAWS—In loving memory of Janice Chiasson and Sandra Laws, who passed away Feb. 11th, 1967.
Somewhere back of the sunset.
Where loveliness never dies.
You live in a land of glory,
Amidst the blue and gold of the sky.
Your life a beautiful memory.
Your absence a silent grief.
You rest in God's beautiful garden.
In the sunset of perfect peace.

CHIASSON — In loving memory of a dear daughter and sister Janice Chiasson who passed away suddenly Feb. 11, 1967.
In our hearts your memory lingers
Always tender, fond and true
There's not a day dear Janice
We do not think of you.
—Sadly missed and fondly remembered by Mom, Reg, Pat, DeWayne and Lyla.

WILLIAMS — In loving memory of our wife and mother, Norma, who passed away February 12, 1969.
Our family circle has been broken,
A link gone from our chain;
But though we're parted for a while,
We know we'll meet again.
Some days we hope to meet you,
Some day, we know not when,
We shall meet in a better land,
And never part again.
We shall meet with many a loved one
That was torn from our embrace,
We shall listen to their voices,
And behold them face to face.
Sunshine passes, shadows fall,
Love's remembrance outlasts all.
—Dave, sons, daughters and families.

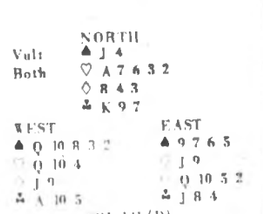
Winning Contract

By HOWARD SCHENKEN and RICHARD L. FREY

Clutching at straws is not exactly a recommended method of survival but even a straw can be better than nothing at all.

In this deal West leads a spade and you are forced to admit that you are in a somewhat parlous condition. You can afford to lose the lead only once, for thereafter the opponents' spades will be good. Yet, on the surface, you can't establish nine tricks without letting the enemy in twice.

You can give up a heart and so establish that suit if the hearts are 3-2, but you'll still have only eight tricks and will have to play a club to bring your tally to nine. Accordingly, you stand to lose the ace of clubs, a heart, and three spades.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 D	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
2 NT	Pass	3 NT	All pass

Opening lead: Three of ♠.

Before accepting the fact that you are a deceased pigeon, you should consider whether there is any conceivable distribution of the opponents' cards which would enable nine tricks to be made.

As a matter of fact there is a possibility, albeit a thin one, of achieving the desired result. Not only must the hearts be 3-2, but the clubs must be 3-3. Moreover, the ace of clubs absolutely must be with West.

You win the spade opening and—instead of tackling hearts, as seems natural—lead a small club. West has to duck this, for if he puts up the ace you have three club tricks, which would give you game.

You win dummy's king of clubs, lead a heart to the king, and duck a heart. When you regain the lead, you cash three more hearts and make your contract.

The key to this small miracle lies in snatching a club trick before tackling hearts. If you tackle hearts first, the opponents will drive out your remaining spade stopper and will never subsequently let you get a club trick.

Fire Damage Near Double In Forests

Forest fire damage in British Columbia during 1969 was almost double the 10-year average, the Legislature was told Tuesday by Ray Williston, lands, forests and water resources minister.

Reviewing progress in the forest industry, Mr. Williston said forest damage last year was estimated to be $6,776,020 compared with a 10-year average of $3,512,707.

He said the increase to a total of 406,765 burned acres was largely because of large fires in the extreme north of the province.

Mr. Williston said during budget debate the estimated net value of forest industry products rose to $1,107,900,000 — up 5 per cent from 1968.

The pulp, paper and allied industries showed the greatest increase over the previous year at 10 per cent, while weak markets during the latter part of the year affected the building products sector.

The 1969 timber harvest was a record 1,890,000,000 board feet.

Area-Wide Vote For Trustees?

Area-wide election of school board trustees rather than the fragmented, municipal system currently used to assemble a board may be discussed Monday at a meeting of the Greater Victoria school board.

Trustee Allan McKinnon gave notice at a meeting of the board's election committee Monday night that he would ask the board to consider seeking legislation to abolish the method by which Victoria, Oak Bay, Esquimalt and urban Saanich all contribute to the nine-member board.

It was true, Trustee McKinnon conceded, that there was no parochialism demonstrated on the board at the present time no matter where the representatives came from but that condition might not always exist. Under other circumstances one could have a board where each sector was fiercely defending its own interests.

STEPPING STONE

There was also a risk, he admitted, that the school board elected on an area-wide basis could be used as a stepping stone to higher and other office by ambitious local politicians but that was a risk which would have to be accepted.

Election on an area-wide basis would have the effect of drawing new blood into the board, he said.

As it now was the odds were heavily loaded in favor of re-election of incumbent members as had been demonstrated in the past few Decembers.

COURTESY MATTER

Trustee W. G. Curran thought the matter should be discussed and possibly voted on at the next formal meeting of the board but that councils in each of the municipalities should be notified of the action before the board asked for provincial legislation making the area-wide vote possible. This, he said, was just a matter or courtesy.

Trustee Peter Bunn agreed. He said he was very much in favor of area-wide elections but not before he had done his municipal council in Oak Bay the courtesy of notifying it of his intention.

It was decided that a letter should be written to each of the councils informing them of the proposed move.

Traffic Hazard Feared

A proposed 12-site sub-division for the former St. Phillip's Church site on Foul Bay Road in Oak Bay will create a traffic hazard in the area, an Oak Bay alderman warned his municipal council Monday night.

Ald. Douglas Watts said of the proposed project at Foul Bay Road and Lansdowne.

NOT HAPPY

"I'm frankly not at all happy with the whole plan," he said. "That road (Foul Bay Road) is already building up heavily in traffic and I just dread the thought of seven more driveways opening onto it.

"I think we'd be creating a traffic hazard on that piece of road."

Council suggested the entire plan be re-examined with a view to providing some sort of rear access for the houses which would be along Foul Bay Road. The remaining five would be along a cul-de-sac on Wessex Crescent.

'REGRETTABLE'

The subdivision now being constructed on Gonzales Hill was described as "regrettable" and "not desirable" by Mayor Frances Elford.

"It is certainly too late for anything that has happened there," she said. The mayor noted that past councils had never considered it possible for a developer to build on that terrain.

Council decided to look into the possibility of acquisition of sites in the adjacent area when they become available.

Outer B.C. Needs Help For Health

Burt Campbell (SC — Revelstoke-Slocan) suggested Tuesday night in the B.C. Legislature that after graduation, doctors and dentists who received financial aid from the government in completing their studies should be required to set up practice in outlying region of B.C.

He said in parts of his own riding and elsewhere in B.C. there is a serious lack of doctors and dentists.

"The reasons are two-fold: I don't think there are enough doctors and dentists, and this is compounded by the desire of so many in the medical profession to concentrate in and around the lower Mainland."

B.C. Federation Joins Dispute

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Federation of Labor Tuesday entered the newspaper contract dispute in Vancouver by accusing negotiators for Pacific Press Ltd. of "dishonesty" in reporting details of the dispute.

Pacific Press, which produces the evening Sun and the morning Province, has been plagued since last Thursday by disruptions in mechanical departments. Production has been curtailed severely by what Pacific Press terms a deliberate slowdown.

Thousands of Sun subscribers have been four days without their daily paper and Tuesday the Sun printed only 63,000 copies. Normal press run is 260,000.

An application for injunctions to halt alleged interference by members of three unions in the production of the newspapers was adjourned in B.C. Supreme Court until today to hear union submissions. The hearing began Monday.

In arguing unsuccessfully pany lawyer W. E. MacDonald pany lawyer W. E. Mac Donald said Pacific Press already has had to rebate $150,000 to advertisers because of newspapers not being delivered.

The three unions are among five involved in the contract dispute, including members of the Vancouver-New Westminster newspaper Guild and the stereotypers' union.

Information Canada By April 1

OTTAWA (CP) — Information Canada will be established April 1, Prime Minister Trudeau announced in the Commons Tuesday.

The organization, to co-ordinate all government information programs, was recommended by a three-man study group, which made its report last November.

Mr. Trudeau said in a statement that Robert Stanbury, minister without portfolio, will be responsible for the planning and development of Information Canada.

Ottawa Seeks Uniform Controls

Phosphate Law Coming

B.C. Set to Move By End of March

By IAN STREET
Colonist Legislature Reporter

The federal government has agreed to draft pilot legislation to control the use of phosphates in laundry detergents and will ask all the provinces to adopt it as a form of uniform pollution control, B.C. Resources Minister Ray Williston said Tuesday.

The minister told the Legislature he telephoned federal Resources Minister J. J. Greene in Ottawa Tuesday morning and was told the federal government "was having trouble making a unilateral decision" on the question of controls over the use of phosphates in detergents.

* * *

(An Ottawa report Tuesday quoted Mr. Greene as saying federal authorities are powerless at present to enforce a ban or progressive reduction of phosphates used in detergents.)

But, Mr. Williston said, the federal minister agreed to his proposal that Ottawa draw up "a pilot act for controlling phosphates which can be passed by each legislature so we can have a uniform set of legislation right across Canada."

* * *

"I think that is real progress," Mr. Williston said. "I have asked Mr. Greene to please have it (the draft legislation) back here by March 15 at the latest.

"I am sure the members of this Legislature will give the necessary permission to have first, second and third reading of this proposed legislation on one day if necessary (in order to approve it before the current session ends in late March."

* * *

He also told the House that he pleaded with Mr. Greene to take the initiative in drawing up legislation for the control of automobile exhaust fumes which would then be submitted to provincial legislatures for their approval. He was told Ottawa would consult with the provinces on this matter.

* * *

Earlier this week, Pollution Probe, a University of Toronto research group, reported that up to 52.5 per cent phosphate content has been found in heavy duty laundry detergents and up to 45 per cent in automatic dishwasher detergents.

The group, which blames phosphates for much of the

Two Face Murder Charges

LONDON (Reuters) — Two brothers were charged Tuesday night with the murder of Muriel McKay, wife of a British newspaper executive who vanished Dec. 29.

The charges were lodged at the police station in suburban Wimbledon, not far from the home of the 56-year-old Mrs. McKay, whose husband, Alexander, is deputy chairman of The News of The World, a sensationalist Sunday newspaper.

* * *

The charges followed a three-day police search for Mrs. McKay's body at an isolated farm in the countryside north of here. But police said Tuesday no body has been found.

The two accused, who had been questioned for 72 hours, were identified as the residents of the farm, Arthur Hosein, 33, and his brother, Nizamodee, 21. Both are believed natives of Trinidad.

* * *

They were also charged with demanding £1,000,000 ($2,600,000) with threats.

The alleged offences were described as taking place Dec. 29 and Feb. 6.

The accused men will appear in court today

Mrs. McKay, a tall, green-eyed brunette, was born in Adelaide, Australia. Her husband returned home on the evening of Dec. 29 to find signs of a struggle in the house and his wife gone.

White Tide Crushes Skiers

Alpine Avalanche Kills 39

•

Loosened by up to 60-mile-an-hour winds of an Alpine blizzard, the mass of snow jumped a national highway, a river, crushed two garages and ripped the roof off a hotel before crashing through the doors and bay windows of the camp's dining room at breakfast time.

Survivors told of the terrible roar of the avalanche, of its dizzy speed — experts said it may have hit at nearly 120 miles an hour — and of their luck in emerging alive from the white fury.

* * *

The dining room was buried and few of the 30 or so eating there escaped alive. The walls were spattered with the blood from bodies crushed against a wall under the pressure of the slide.

Most of the dead and injured were young people enjoying a low-cost ski vacation at the Union des Centres de Plain Air (Union of Fresh Air Centres). Of the 194 guests, many were French postal and railway workers. There were about 20 Belgians and six West Germans staying at the camp's hostel.

* * *

Some bodies, including those of ski trail workers going to their jobs, were hurled high in the air. The slide's 100-yard-wide front caught cars and carried them 100 yards away.

"There was a gay happy atmosphere at the dining tables," said Jean-Charles Loos, 25, who suffered head and hip injuries. "We were talking about where we would go skiing.

"Suddenly, there was this rumbling sound. As the noise became deafening, I realized it was an avalanche. I just had time to dive against the wall for protection. Then a great wall of snow burst through the door and hit me. I was submerged and I remember no more until I woke up in a neighboring house."

Chantal Demur, 22, said she

WILLISTON:

'I want to emphasize . . . this is going to be one of the most serious years that we as a province will face'

'Clouds' On B.C. Horizon

B.C. Resources Minister Ray Williston warned in the Legislature Tuesday there are "some clouds on the British Columbia economic horizon" and called upon labor and management in the forest industry to resolve their differences "in a realistic and responsible manner."

Failure by the industry to meet the challenge of declining markets, rising costs, and the threat of labor-management disputes, the minister said, is bound to affect government revenues to a point where it could not afford to provide all the benefits set out in the 1970 budget.

"I want to emphasize that fact," Mr. Williston said. "This is going to be one of the most serious years that we as a province will face . . ."

* * *

"Obvious areas for concern are the market for timber products at prices which allow for profitable operation. At this time our comparative direct forest revenues are on the decline.

"This relates to lumber prices which on average approximate those paid three years ago. Costs are up and prices are down."

Mr. Williston said 70 per cent of B.C.'s foreign markets for lumber are affected by U.S. anti-inflation measures which make housing capital more difficult to raise south of the border. Any decline, he added, would directly affect revenue returns to the government in the form of stumpage.

* * *

Dealing briefly with the labor situation, the minister said pending negotiations promise to be more difficult because of the market situation.

Mr. Williston also warned that the two major crown corporations—B.C. Hydro and the Pacific Great Eastern Railway — would be seriously affected by disruption in the forest industry. Both, he said, are dependent upon continuous activity in the industry to reach budget goals in the coming year.

He noted kraft pulp prices are improving together with the demand for this B.C. product in world markets. But he said it will be another year before the effects of this

Labor Willing To Talk

OTTAWA (CP) — Labor spokesman Murray Cotterill said Tuesday a major failure of the national conference on price stability was that it failed to require business to obtain advance approval for price increases. (See Page 10.)

But the steelworkers' official said that if business was serious about tying together costs and prices, labor was willing to talk.

Bill Legalizing Abortion Passes Hawaii Senate

HONOLULU (UPI) — The Hawaii senate Tuesday night voted to repeal the state's law outlawing abortions performed by physicians. The landmark bill would make Hawaii the first state in the U.S. to abolish criminal penalties for abortions performed under proper medical conditions. The senate vote was 17-7.

Next stop for the bill is the House of Representatives, where political observers say it has a "fair" chance of passage.

Police Stay Off Job

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) About 150 members of the Newfoundland Constabulary voted late Tuesday to remain off their jobs until 32 suspended constables are reinstated. But one spokesman said if violence breaks out they would return to work.

Deputy assistant chief John Lawlor and an inspector also came to the meeting but met in a separate room with Tom Fraize, chairman of the police constables committee.

Arabs Hit Israelis In Munich

MUNICH (AP) — Grenade-hurling Arab commandos attacked passengers waiting to board an Israeli airliner here Tuesday and were caught up in a gun fight with Munich police.

One passenger was killed and 12 persons, including three commandos, were wounded in the incident at Munich's Reim airport.

Asaf Dayan, 24-year-old actor son of Israeli Defence Minister Moshe Dayan, was among the passengers, but he was not hurt. Friends said he was en route to London to discuss a movie contract.

Hanna Meron, one of Israel's best-known actresses, was wounded and Dayan accompanied her to a Munich hospital where she was reported in serious condition.

It was the fifth Arab guerrilla attack against El Al, Israel's national airlines, in the last 30 months.

Police identified the slain passenger as Arieh Katzenstein, 32, from Haifa. His father, Heinz, 57, was among the six passengers

New Federal Policy Ends Prison Rule—Indian MLA

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE

The federal government's new Indian policy will mean a release from 103 years of paternal care and prison-like control for Canada's native people, B.C.'s Indian MLA told the B.C. Legislature Tuesday night.

Frank Calder (NDP—Atlin) said the native Indians have for years been condemning Canada's Indian laws and that they "should consider this statement of policy a victory after their many years of protest against a dictatorial administration . . . of those damn Indian agents."

* * *

When provincial jurisdiction of Indian affairs is finally granted, Mr. Calder said, it will mean "a freedom from restraint, from military control, and a freedom from Canada's black holes of iniquities.

* * *

Mr. Calder said he is anxious to see Indians get municipal status and self-government on reserves and he said he hopes for a favorable result in the efforts of Indians at Cape Mudge on Quadra Island to gain municipal status. If they do the next area to seek municipal status may well be Mr. Calder's own Nass River Valley Indians, the Nishgas, he said.

While welcoming the change in Indian affairs Mr. Calder charged the federal government with failure to cope with market improvement are felt in the provincial economy.

The minister added: "The dependence of the pulp industry on residuals from the sawmills is now more firmly established so that a disruption of activity at any point in the timber manufacture process tends to slow production on a wide front."

Mr. Williston said the $1,166,177,415 budget presented by Premier Bennett last Friday will turn out to be the best provincial budget in Canada this year "if one considers three essentials" which he listed.

● Anti-inflationary policies needed for treatment of "a bad case of economic diarrhea which we have at the present time."

● Basic needs of the people who are caught in a price squeeze "and cannot react to better themselves."

● Problems of those seeking an education or buying a home in the current period of tight money and high interest rates.

In his 90-minute speech Mr. Williston covered a number of other topics including:

● Defence of the government's handling of the Cypress Bowl controversy. He denied opposition charges that the crown lands leased to a private developer had been dedicated as parkland in the early 1940s. And the minister said all action taken by the lands department was in conjunction with the municipality of West Vancouver which adjoins Cypress Bowl.

● Alpine Outdoor Recreation Resources Ltd., the private developer given lease to purchase agreements for 600 acres of crown land in Cypress Bowl, since ordered held in abeyance, will be given until Mayor June to come up with new partners. Mr. Williston said Benguet Consolidated Inc., with gambling interests in the Bahamas, is out of the picture finally as far as the government is concerned.

was warned by American sources that conservationists

● The minister said he was warned by American sources that conservationists in Washington State were planning to fight the Skagit River Valley flooding battle in B.C. because "they felt they couldn't win it at home." He said he didn't believe the reports until he heard the attacks by opposition members in the legislature this session.

● He said the flooding behind Ross Lake Dam in Washington, which will engulf more than 6,000 acres in B.C., "will create one of the most accessible, scenic and delightfully usable spots to be found in the Lower Mainland."

● The minister said a suggestion by William Hartley (NDP—Yale Lillooet) that nearby Hat Creek coal deposits be used to provide alternate thermal power sources was unworkable because it would not provide the peaking power that Seattle needs from the enlarged Ross Dam.

● He added that an agreement signed by the International Joint Commission in 1967 governing the flooding of the Skagit Valley protects B.C. against inflation by giving it the option of taking electrical energy instead of money in compensation — amounting to about 9½ million KWH per annum.

was buried for about two hours in a pocket of air under the snow before she was dug out.

Benoit Miko, 21, of Brussels said he was caught on the hostel stairway when the avalanche struck "with a frightening noise," sweeping him along a corridor and out a window.

"I found myself outside lying in the snow," he related.

"My ears were still filled with the terrible sound of the avalanche. My arm was bleeding, and I wandered in a daze into a hotel opposite and asked them to bind it up."

★ ★ ★

Mike and other survivors returned to the dining room to find metal tables twisted and a stove in the kitchen cut in half. Then with plates and their bare hands they began digging for survivors.

An investigation will be made to determine the cause and the responsibilities, if any, for the deaths, it was announced in Paris.

Arabs to Trial

ATHENS (UPI) — Two Arab commandoes charged with opening fire on an Israeli airliner at Athens airport Dec. 26, 1968, will go on trial Feb. 17, the Greek government said. Mahmoud Issa Mohamad, 26, and Maher Hussein Suleyman el Yamani, 20, are accused of killing a passenger and injuring a stewardess.

wounded. The others wounded were the plane's pilot and flight engineer, a policeman and the commandos.

Police said their initial investigation indicated three Arabs made the attack but a fourth Arab seized at the airport remained in custody.

In Amman, Jordan, the Popular Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine and a smaller Palestinian Arab guerrilla group called the Action Organization for the Liberation of Palestine claimed responsibility for the attack.

The grenades exploded in an airport lounge and aboard a bus taking passengers to a plane that had stopped here on a flight from Tel Aviv to London. Some of those injured were on the bus and others were waiting in the terminal.

Hermann Schreiber, head of the Munich police department, said 19 persons were on the bus when the attack began. He said the bus was parked outside the terminal and the pilot and co-pilot were walking toward it when three or four men armed with pistols blocked their path.

Avner Idan, minister at the Israeli embassy in Bonn, said the pilot "saw one Arab pull a hand grenade from his pocket and threw himself onto the Arab."

The crew members and the attacker were injured by a grenade that exploded near them as they grappled, Idan said.

Meanwhile, the police chief said, another Arab jumped onto the bus and threatened the driver who pressed a release opening the rear door so the passengers could flee.

One Arab threw a grenade into the bus and a gunfight then broke out between the attackers and police, Schreiber said.

Young Canecutters Heading for Cuba

DETROIT (UPI) — A group of 44 young men and women who said they were going skiing headed eastward by bus Tuesday but their final destination was believed to be the sugar cane fields of Cuba, not the ski slopes of Canada.

The bus was one of about a dozen from all over the United States reportedly carrying passengers who hope to board a Cuban freighter and help in harvesting sugar cane. Several of the passengers called themselves members of the "Venceremos Brigade." The Spanish word venceremos translates to "We will conquer."

Official sources in Washington said that 216 brigade members were expected to arrive at Saint John, N.B., today, aboard a Cuban cattle boat after spending two months harvesting sugar cane in Havana province.

The group was held up Monday night at the Canadian border at Windsor when customs officials said they were "not bona fide nonimmigrants" or visitors.

New Indian Policy

Indian problems in the past, lacking funds for Indian affairs administration, planning to evade further constitutional responsibilities and with planning to "avoid the settlement of the Indian land claims."

He also charged the white paper was "preconceived and in preparation prior to the consultations with the native Indians in Canada."

This, he said, was one of the reasons why Indians across Canada have protested the proposals of the white paper.

But, he said, the main reason for opposition was that provincial jurisdiction was not part of the terms of reference in consultations with Indians.

Any future success in mapping government changes in Indian affairs will require continual consultation, confrontation and dialogue with Indians, he said.

Mr. Calder said that after years of condemning the Indian Act and federal Indian administration for all its flaws, "the government statement should be a cause for celebrations."

He said he looked forward to the provinces assuming jurisdiction and "I cannot understand why the native Indian people should remain under separate and stagnant laws when they can benefit from the provincial laws under which they rightfully belong just like you do."

He said native Indian youth, "the backbone of the native Indians of tomorrow is just plain fed up with the segregational, colonizational and reserve system."

Their modern needs are in the cities and they recognize the need for the switch of jurisdiction, he said.

"To put it bluntly, I advocate provincial jurisdiction because I am convinced that one day that is exactly how it is going to be, and I am not one to deny the future generation of native Indians their rightful place under the sun."

Mr. Williston in his speech also indicated that air pollution controls in B.C., now the responsibility of the health department, will be put under the Pollution Control Board. The change he said will mean single agency control over pollution of land, water and air.

Drug Abuse Indicated If Diet Pills Misused

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Your Good Health

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My daughter tells me she and her husband are taking diet pills. Neither is more than a few pounds overweight, and they aren't on a diet. They take the pills to keep awake.

Her husband seems to be "hooked" on these pills and begs her to keep him supplied. He also urges her to take them. He is very nervous and gets angry easily.

★ ★ ★

My daughter tells me it is very easy to obtain the pills and gets all the refills she wants just by telephoning the doctor. I am worried. — Mrs. L.T.

This is a gross misuse of so-called diet pills — in fact, an example of one thing that is meant by the term "drug abuse."

While you don't specify just what kind of pills they are, they evidently contain some form of the amphetamines, known these days among drug takers as "speed."

There is no valid excuse for using them to lose a few pounds; very moderate dieting can take care of that. But when people take the pills and don't diet at all, the end result is easily predictable. Either they'll gain weight again as soon as they stop the pills, or they'll have to stay on the pills indefinitely.

And if they stay on the pills? Jitters, nervousness, and in this case perhaps the husband's bad temper are the usual result. And people do get "hooked" on amphetamines.

From the sound of things, the husband is a dependent sort of fellow; if your daughter can be led to see the light, perhaps she can get him "unhooked." And herself, too, perhaps?

I've never had much confidence in these drugs for reducing anyway; they have some value, if properly used on a short-term basis, just to tient that physiologically he tient that physiologically het can lose weight, and that the proper way is to learn to eat a little less than he has been eating, and exercise more.

★ ★ ★

A conscientious physician will see to it that the patient does not use the drugs long enough to become "hooked." Unhappily, we have heard of too many cases in which refills have been granted rather casually — not to mention cases of patients going to more than one doctor and getting more pills than either doctor knew.

CFL Clubs Pick Players Today

TORONTO (CP) — Quarterback Wayne Holm, a senior from Simon Fraser University, is expected to be a prime target today in the Canadian Football League's 1970 draft of 243 eligible Canadian college players.

But Rogers Lehew, general manager of Calgary Stampeders, who own the first choice compliments of an earlier deal with Winnipeg Blue Bombers, Tuesday was not anxious to claim the B.C. youth.

LINESMEN NEEDED

"I don't know if we'll draft Holm or not," Lehew said. "We need Canadian linemen."

Earl Lunsford, Winnipeg general manager, said he was not disappointed at losing the chance to draft Holm. "I don't think we could have afforded to play him (Holm) even as a backup. He lacks experience," Lunsford said.

COMPLETES DEALS

The Blue Bombers, who had the first draft pick after finishing last in the Western Conference in 1969, gave it to Calgary in exchange for the rights to defensive tackle Doug Walker of Queen's University. Winnipeg will choose seventh in the first round, first and fifth in the second round. The seventh pick completes last season's Dave Raimey deal with Toronto Argonauts of the Eastern Conference and the fifth pick in the second round stems from a deal with the EFC's Hamilton Tiger-Cats.

EXPECTS VALUE

Despite his lack of interest in Holm, and the preference of his colleagues for U.S. college-trained Canadian youths, Lunsford expects full value from the Canadian draft for his Blue Bombers.

"About half our Canadian strength last season was from draft choices," Lunsford said. "We had two number one picks last year and both made our team.

"Doug Strong, a defensive halfback from Waterloo Lutheran, was our first choice," Lunsford said. "We also had Montreal's first pick and we took Rob McLaren, a linebacker from Simon Fraser. He played the last eight games for us."

WILL BE ACTIVE

The Winnipeg manager said he intends to be active in the draft for at least three rounds.

Separate conference meetings are scheduled for today along with the draft proceedings.

Post Strike Violence Flares

MONTREAL (CP) — Violence flared up Tuesday night as roaming groups supporting striking mail truck drivers smashed two trucks near the city's main post office building, injuring one driver.

Take Off Fat With Home Recipe Plan

It's simple how quickly one may lose pounds of unsightly fat right in your own home. Make this home recipe yourself. It's easy, no trouble at all and costs little. Just go to your drugstore and ask for Naran. Pour this into a pint bottle and add enough grapefruit juice to fill the bottle. Take two tablespoonsful twice a day as needed and follow the Naran Reducing Plan.

If your first purchase does not show you a simple easy way to lose bulky fat and help regain slender more graceful curves; if reducible pounds and inches of excess fat don't disappear from neck, chin, arms, abdomen, hips, calves and ankles just return the empty bottle for your money back. Follow this easy way endorsed by many who have tried this plan and help bring back alluring curves and graceful slenderness. Note how quickly bloat disappears—how much better you feel. More alive, youthful appearing and active.

It has been said that more business is done by many people on the golf course than they do in their offices. For the authenticity of this theory I have no conclusive proof but certainly golf clubs derive a considerable part of their revenue from members on expense accounts.

Because of the federal tax reform proposals, now under consideration, that would exclude expense accounts as legitimate income tax deductions, many of Canada's deluxe golf clubs are seriously worried.

"The real big spenders are the business executives who entertain their clients in the clubhouse," said an official of one eastern club I met in Montreal last week while attending the annual general meeting of the Royal Canadian Golf Association.

He feared that if such entertaining is not to be allowed as a tax-deductible expense many clubs will be faced with new economic difficulties which will only be solved by increasing dues and entry fees.

He argued that golf-club spending was a legitimate business charge because of the great volume of business that is done on the course and in the locker room.

The situation is serious enough to have persuaded the Royal Canadian Golf Association to prepare a brief for presentation to the Finance Minister Benson, protesting this part of his white paper proposals.

The RCGA decision to separate the Willingdon from the amateur championship is a reversal of the stand taken in the early 1960s, when a majority favored playing the Willington simultaneously with the qualifying rounds of the amateur.

The wisdom of the step was questioned by many, including the B.C. Golf Association, which always thought that if the Willingdon was worth playing at all it was worth playing well.

The fact that there is now no qualifying stage for the Canadian Amateur — it lost its match play aspect last year — has convinced the RCGA that the time had come to revert to the old system.

Under the revised formula, the Willingdon Cup event will be played on the Monday and Tuesday of the "amateur week," followed Wednesday to Saturday by the four rounds of the championship.

In order that no advantage will be given to Willingdon competitors, the other amateur entrants will have the use of the course on Monday and Tuesday afternoons for practice purposes.

If Willingdon Cup players have a higher handicap than that prescribed for the amateur, they will be excluded. Hitherto all Willingdon Cup players have been automatically entered in the amateur no matter what their handicap was.

It is thus quite possible that in a "hot" field, such as the one at Royal Colwood in 1967, when the top handicap limit was cut to two, a large number of the Willingdon Cup men would be excluded.

The same formula will apply to the Junior Inter-provincial team matches and the Canadian junior championship, although in this case all team players will automatically be allowed to play in the individual championship.

The only innovation from last year's junior at Kelowna is that a special trophy is to be awarded the player of 16 years and under who has the best four-round total in the championship.

It is hoped this will be an incentive to the younger players, who might have little chance in winning the title.

A new award, the Bailey Memorial Trophy is being presented for this event. It will honor the name of Jack Bailey, a Toronto governor of the RCGA, who died last year in an accident.

The RCGA has accepted an invitation from the Brazil Golf Association to send a three-man team to Sao Paulo next May to participate in an international amateur event.

The Canadian team will have its expenses paid by Brazil.

The competition will in some way substitute for the Americas Cup event between Canada, the U.S. and Mexico, which has been abandoned at the request of the USGA.

Canada's other international participation this year is in the World Cup to be held in Spain.

John Carlow, who held the post of president of the Gorge Vale club for 10 consecutive years before retiring a few years ago, has been re-elected.

A former president of the B.C. Golf Association, John made his comeback at the annual general meeting of the Gorge Vale club Monday. He takes the place of Hugh Reid, who had served the last two years and was not standing for re-election.

Other officials elected included Iver Hansen, the vice-president, Art Bridge, Gary Small and Cliff Soberg, directors, all of them newcomers to office.

A meeting of the captains of the Victoria District Golf clubs is being held at Gorge Vale Thursday to discuss this season's local open tournament formula.

It will be followed a week later by the annual meeting of the district committee.

Owners Not Satisfied . . .

. . . But Pilots Will Stay

Seattle Given One-Year Reprieve

CHICAGO (AP) — The Pilots will remain in Seattle at least one more year but the American League may become a trustee of the baseball club until sound financial ownership can be obtained.

League president Joe Cronin indicated Tuesday that some club owners were not satisfied with the proposed restructuring of Seattle's financial status.

Cronin said that league counsel was in the process of talking to the Bank of California on the mechanics of renegotiating a $3,500,000 loan to the club. Conditions of the loan have created problems for would-be purchasers.

Before voting to leave the club in Seattle, the owner group heard a presentation from the new 'rescue squad', headed by Edward E. Carlson, trying to save the Seattle franchise.

Representatives of Milwaukee and Fort Worth-Dallas groups, which hoped to get the franchise if the league rejected Seattle's final financial proposition, were ready to present plans to the meeting.

Already six of the provincial representatives for the national final at Winnipeg, March 2-6, have been decided and four have played in the Canadian championship previously.

STILL IN RUNNING

In addition, former Canadian champions Terry Braunstein of Winnipeg, and Hector Gervais of Edmonton are still in the running at the provincial level along with defending world titlist Ron Northcott of Calgary.

ALREADY IN

Lyall Dagg of Vancouver, the 1964 world champion, has already won the right to represent British Columbia, Hap Mabey of Moncton will represent New Brunswick for the fifth time, and Ron Franklyn of Halifax will be returning to the national final for the third time.

Prince Edward Island will also have a familiar face returning, Art Burke of Charlottetown, who skippered the Islanders in 1961, will be leading his rink back to the national finals.

BOWRING NEW

Among newcomers, Lester Bowring of St. John's, will skip the Newfoundland representative and Paul Savage, 22, of Toronto, leads the Ontario foursome.

The Manitoba championship, which opened Monday, runs through Saturday, while Saskatchewan is still involved in separate championships for the titles in the north and south.

Gervais and Northcott are in the Alberta playoff this weekend, while the Quebec championship is currently in progress.

A Northern Ontario representative will be decided in a playoff at Thunder Bay this weekend.

Nanaimo Quartet Wins Title

CLOVERDALE — A Nanimo rink, skipped by Don MacRae, will represent British Columbia in the Canadian seniors' curling championships at Kamloops starring Feb. 23.

MacRae and his mates, Gene Koster, Bev Smiley and Dr. Gordon Howden scored 11-7 and 8-7 wins Tuesday over Jerry Hallquist of Summerland to win the best-of-three B.C. final.

Playing on swingy ice, MacLeod fell behind 5-7 in the afternoon after holding a 5-2 lead but scored two on each of the eighth, ninth and tenth ends for the win.

On near perfect ice in the evening, MacRae lost an early lead when Hallquist counted three on the fifth end and another on the seventh end for a 5-3 lead. But the Nanaimo quarter cracked a four-ender on the eighth, stole one on the ninth and claimed the title when the Summerland rink ran out of rocks on the home end.

Duncan Parents Protest

'Close Gym' Request Follows Virus Worry

DUNCAN — An outbreak of planter warts at Quamichan junior secondary school, Duncan has caused alarm among parents who sent a delegation to Cowichan and district school board Monday evening, requesting that the school's gymnasium, shower and changing rooms be closed down.

Trustees were told by the small delegation that there were 70 reported cases of the virus infection. One woman said she had visited the school that day and observed that the gymnasium was not clean and the hallways were filthy.

It was the third appeal to the board regarding the matter. The first two were in letters from alarmed parents and North Cowichan Southend Ratepayers' Association.

Trustee David Bradbury, chairman of the building and transportation committee said he was aware of the increased outbreak of planter wart infection at Quamichan, as well as Mount Prevost junior secondary school and Duncan elementary.

The matter, as far as could be determined, was under control. Trustee Stan Turner told the delegation that the area had been thoroughly disinfected and cleaned out.

Mr. Bradbury said his committee recommended that due to existing sanitary problems and safety considerations, the education committee should give consideration to a directive to the schools demanding that proper footwear be used in the gymnasiums.

"This type of virus thrives in a damp condition and there are poorly-drained areas outside the washrooms," he stressed.

"If the health department tells us to close down the gymnasium and the washrooms, we will do so immediately."

★ ★ ★

Eric Lewis, district superintendent of schools, said he had discussed the problem with Dr. P. J. Reynolds, district medical health officer from Nanaimo, and even he was not too sure if the virus was caused by dirt.

"Dr. Reynolds said that no type of disinfectant would eliminate the virus and he recommended that the students wear shoes and socks at all time. But at no time did he suggest that the showers and gyms be closed down."

The board agreed to close down the Maple Bay kindergarten class on a temporary basis to investigate the area's safety for the 25 children enrolled.

The class is held in St. Peter's Church hall on Chisholm Trail. The decision occurred after Mrs. John Roome, who attended the meeting as a concerned citizen and not as a mother of a kindergarten student, told the board that the class's recent move from Maple Bay school portable classroom to the church hall endangered the lives of each of the children attending the kindergarten.

As well as the small, sloping, unfenced corner lot which has no crosswalk or safety signs, Mrs. Roome's main concern was a nasty uncovered three-foot ditch filled with water, scum, sewage and weed at the foot of Chisholm Trail between the church hall and Maple Bay Road. The board agreed that the school should be closed down immediately until the situation was properly assessed.

Trustee Margaret Whittaker was accused of using a man's vocation to pursue her own political aspirations by Trustee Stan Turner.

The statement occurred while a motion of censure against Mrs. Whittaker was being discussed. The motion, which charged that she distorted facts when giving information to the news media, was narrowly defeated.

The motion was submitted following Mrs. Whittaker's stand on the board's decision to terminate the employment of a permanent confidential employee, Fred Mills, who was employed by the board for 14 years and was one year short of retirement.

In a recent letter to the news media, Mrs. Whittaker said she wished to disassociate herself with the decision of the board to terminate Mr. Mill's employment.

"I consider it entirely irresponsible and beyond the bound of ethics for a board of trustees representing the public to act in this manner," she said.

Mrs. Whittaker informed the other trustees that "I was only doing my duty and was not aware that he would be offered another job."

A motion was passed to offer Mr. Mills a full-janitorial position at Drinkwater School, starting March 1, until his retirement.

Campbell Views Pollution Battle:

Individual Action Needed

Government action against pollution must be backed by many individual decisions to join the fight, Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell said Tuesday.

"Every day there are a number of housewives making personal decisions about those laundry detergents," the minister told approximately 60 members of the Kiwanis Club of Victoria in the Empress Hotel.

★ ★ ★

Disposal of non-returnable bottles, litter in parks and roadside garbage were all matters where the individual could help decide the outcome of the anti-pollution fight, he said.

Mr. Campbell also said that forthcoming legislation would eliminate the traditional arrangement allowing a company or municipality to pollute to a certain extent, regardless of the result.

★ ★ ★

The recent throne speech said that the government would enforce air quality standards announced last year.

Mr. Campbell said that in future, "technological permits" would be issued, keyed to changing circumstances.

"It's going to apply to such things as devices which might become mandatory on autos," he said.

Mr. Campbell recalled that when discussions were held with the city of Nelson concerning its dumping of raw sewage into the Kootenay River, Nelson produced a permit issued in 1919.

"That is taking absurdity to the ultimate goalpost," he said.

However, he added, it was "typical" of the attitude of both municipalities and companies which feel they have the right to pollute on the basis of a permit or precedent.

"The person responsible for pollution at the point of discharge should be absolutely responsible for the cost," Mr. Campbell declared.

★ ★ ★

He cited New Westminster, which for years has been discharging raw sewage into the Fraser.

He also supported regional government as a means of cleaning up the environment.

"You can't sewer Greater Victoria at all if you take it on a compartmentalized basis," said the minister.

Trophy Goes To Bank

GANGES — While 19-year-old Kathleen West regained the international pancake title for Liberal, Kansas, Salt Spring islanders were enjoying their own Shrove Tuesday festivities.

There were about 11 categories for a series of pancake races, the highlight of which was an international race, restricted to island organizations and businesses, which was won by Dave Hastie for the Bank of Montreal. He received a "gold-plated" frying pan. Second was Dave Roberts, B.C. Ferries who won last year's race. Jim Marston of the Lions was third.

In the annual race against Olney, England, the Liberal girl's time of 59.1 beat a time of one minute 11 seconds by Sylvia Winstanley, Olney's representative for the 415-yard course and broke the previous English record of one minute three seconds.

Federal Official Answers Indian Criticisms

Talks Problems Blamed On 'Misunderstandings'

An Indian Affairs department public relations officer said Tuesday that most of the problems that have arisen at the regional band managers' conference being held in Victoria are probably due to "misunderstandings."

"I'm certainly not calling them (band managers) liars," said Bob Williams in a telephone interview from Vancouver. "They may not be misleading you; they may be speaking from a different point of view."

Mr. Williams said he considered some charges made last week by delegates to the conference to be erroneous.

Speaking of the charge that a resource person who had been expected from Ottawa for the first day's meeting did not appear, he said, "I think the one you're referring to is John Nichols."

Asked whether or not these persons usually advised those who had invited them that they would not be appearing, Mr. Williams said, "I would presume so."

He said he knew nothing about a charge by delegates that the speaker not only failed to appear, but did not advise them of his intention until a letter was received two days after he had been expected.

Speaking of another charge that delegates had been promised they would be paid for travelling time, but had not been, Mr. Williams said, "I was told yesterday (Monday) that Mr. Stelkia had been paid for his travelling time."

Chief Jim Stelkia of Oliver, near Penticton, had been mentioned in this respect in a Saturday morning news story, although several of the delegates had complained of the same problem.

Mr. Williams said he had not questioned whether or not anyone else had been paid for the travelling time.

Tom Sampson, band manager for the Tsartlip reserve near Victoria and one of the conference's organizers, said he had been advised Tuesday that Chief Stelkia would be receiving the travelling time allotment Wednesday.

"You can't blame him (Williams) for wanting to cover up for the department," he said.

Another complaint voiced by the delegates had been that information prepared by the Indian organizers had not been distributed by the department, as it was to have been.

He said responsibility for distributing the information lay with the Institute of Adult Studies, where the conference is being held by representatives of 41 of the more than 188 Indian bands in B.C. and the Yukon.

Family Loses Home

Quaife Backs Study For Joint Services

DUNCAN — Duncan council Monday night agreed to take part in a joint services study with North Cowichan and pay one third of the cost, after Mayor Jim Quaife made use of his privilege and voted for the proposal.

Opposing the motion, which was moved by Ald. Rois Harder and seconded by Ald. Dick Benzies, were Ald. Tom Kilpatrick, Ald. Allan Kerr and Ald. Martin Lukaitis.

North Cowichan council last week agreed to pay two-thirds of the study which will cost between $8,200 and $9,700.

Ald. Kilpatrick asked: "Why another expenditure? We in the city have all the information we need. We have no water problem, why should we spend our taxpayers' money to find out the problems they have in the north? I definitely will not vote for this motion."

Ald. Kerr stated he had not received any information on the progress of the report and he wanted to know what became of an earlier report which had been made for the city a few years ago.

He stressed "Chemainus and Crofton would not be interested in getting married to the city, I suggest we clear the desk. I'd like to see the report rejected and start talking about extending the city boundary to Herd Road. I think people in the south end of the municipality should be given the democratic right to say whether or not they want to join the city."

Ald. Harder said: "This is getting ridiculous."

He told Ald. Kerr that the Duncan-North Cowichan joint committee had merely been asked to find out whether a joint services study should be undertaken.

Ald. Benzies said: "We tried to find a common ground of discussion. The alderman (Ald. Kerr) speaks of marriage but we haven't even started the courtship. A complete amalgamation (Duncan and North Cowichan) at this time is not practical and impossible and no such suggestion was made by the committee.

"We need a new fire truck. Would it not be more logical to find out whether it would be more practical just to have one fire department for instance?"

He pointed out that the time would come when the city might experience water problems.

★ ★ ★

He said: "It would not be of any use to go crying to North Cowichan in 10 years when we need the water. We should be planning public utilities right now for the next 10 years. We have to look very seriously at this."

Mayor Quaife said city council had undertaken an obligation when the joint councils agreed to make a joint report. He, Ald. Saunders, Ald. Benzies and Ald. Harder voted for the motion.

Drivers Watch Flashing UFO

DUNCAN — David Eliason, 23, of Duncan, spent the remainder of his Saturday evening looking for an unidentified flying object he and several people had sighted earlier.

"It was around 10 p.m. Saturday evening," said Mr. Eliason, a part-time taxi driver and full-time millworker at Youbou. "I was about a quarter of a mile south of Duncan when several cars travelling north and south, including myself, pulled off to the side of the Trans-Canada Highway because there was this big orange light in the sky with lights flashing all around it."

Mr. Eliason said there were approximately 20 people standing around, awed by the "wierd spectacle" they were viewing.

"I thought it was a flying saucer or something like that. It was something like I have never seen before. At first it looked just like a star and then it shot down, getting bigger and bigger and then stopped overhead. The orange part was still and lights, like houselights, were revolving.

"I radioed the taxi office but they couldn't see it from where they were. Then everything went black just like someone had switched the lights off. I felt really wierd. When it went black, everyone just got into their cars and drove away. I kept watching for it for the rest of the night but it didn't come back.

'High Level in Wildlife Is Alarming'

Biologist Warns About DDT Threat

NANAIMO — A Nanaimo-based B.C. fish and wildlife biologist allied himself with the new Nanaimo SPEC branch Tuesday by firing a broadside of facts and figures.

Charlie Lyons, in a prepared statement, said: "Our information suggests that virtually all species of fish, birds and animals in British Columbia contain measurable levels of insecticides in their bodies."

He said the substances were predominantly DDT or dieldrin types of chlorinated hydrocarbon which are classified as persistent. He also included mercury compounds as dangerous.

★ ★ ★

"The high level of DDT in some of our B.C. wildlife is extremely alarming. It is frightening to find that a fur seal captured on the west coast of the Island in 1969 contained 31.8 parts per million DDT and 15 parts per million dieldrin; that a dolphin taken at Oak Bay contained 31.8 parts per million DDT; that a harbor porpoise taken at Haro Straits in 1967 contained 33.4 parts per million DDT and 2.3 parts per million dieldrin; that a Peale falcon taken at Saanichton Spit in 1969 contained 58.4 parts per million DDT and 1.3 parts per million dieldrin; that a Rhinocerous Auklet taken in the Queen Charlotte Islands in 1969 contained 5.1 parts per million DDT and .3 parts per million dieldrin."

Present acceptable limits of the poisons in human foodstuffs was set at seven parts per million, said Mr. Lyons.

He said that even the relatively short-lived fish were accumulating insecticide concentrations which would be passed on to the next eater possibly a human, thereby further concentrating the poison in accumulative dose of poison.

He said 1968 coho taken at Harmac, south of Nanaimo, had .057 parts per million DDT and .006 parts per millions dieldrin. Herring taken there in 1969 had .4 parts per million DDT and .025 parts per million dieldrin and Cowichan Bay oysters in 1967 contained .36 parts per million DDT.

Duncan Churches

Youth Aid Launched

DUNCAN — The recently formed Duncan and District Council of Churches at its Sunday meeting at Silverbridge Inn, decided to set up a committee with the aim of purchasing a house to serve as a home for neglected or homeless boys in the near future.

Council president Rev. Allan Kerr said, "We already have looked at a large, old house which would be suitable for that purpose."

He said a couple would look after the boys and social welfare would pay for the home's operation. Boys eligible for the home would range in age from six to 14.

MAIN IDEA

Mr. Kerr said, "The main idea behind this proposed home is to give young boys love, understanding and discipline."

He pointed out that a similiar home at Victoria has been operated with great success for the past five years. Mr. Kerr said the idea of a boys home was given to the local church council by Sunday's guest speaker Canon Graham Baker, president of the Council of Churches at Victoria.

Mr. Kerr said, "Canon Baker outlined the work of his council and told us how the council can overcome the difficulties of different denominations to achieve community projects. People say we are divided, but we are not divided. We not only work together in the church, but in and with the community."

He stressed this co-operation between local churches will again be strongly demonstrated Good Friday when instead of individual church services, all churches in Duncan will combine in a Procession of Witness.

He said the procession will assemble at the Treed Mound, downtown Duncan, will go along Trunk Road and from there to the Cowichan high school where a brief service will be held.

AIM IS HELP

Mr. Kerr emphasized, "We are all Christians, we all want to help, we all believe in the same teaching and the Good Friday procession will demonstrate our goodwill to work together in the name of Christ."

The council Saturday will meet to form a citizenship association which will help to make swearing-in ceremonies of new Canadian citizens more meaningful.

Hunter-Training Course Coming

GOLD RIVER — A B.C. Government hunter-training course, sponsored by Gold River Rod and Gun Club, will start next week.

This course, open to all persons who will be 12 by the start of the 1970 hunting season, will last for seven weeks. A spokesman for the club says that it is hoped to run two course simultaneously, one for juniors and one for adults.

The training program, initiated by the fish and wildlife branch, while primarily designed to train safe hunters, embodies a wide variety of subjects and could be described as an outdoor sportsman's training course, he said.

PROGRAM SUBJECTS

Some of the subjects to be included in the program are: game management, rules and regulations, identification and habitat of big game, upland game birds, waterfowl, carnivores and fish, safe gun handling, care of firearms, first aid, bush survival, archery and water safety.

There will be no charge for the course. Students are to take an examination and obtain a minimum mark of 70 per cent at the end of the course. Successful students will receive a certificate and crest.

Instructors will be Darcey De Hart, Ray Nicklin, Larry Going and Keith Sequin. They recently successfully completed an instructors' training course in Campbell River.

Four directors elected were John Marinus, George Taylor, Bill Flemming and Doug Newsom Junior, and appointment from CFB Comox will complete the list of directors.

Ottawa Seeks Uniform Controls

Phosphate Law Coming

B.C. Set to Move By End of March

By IAN STREET
Colonist Legislature Reporter

The federal government has agreed to draft pilot legislation to control the use of phosphates in laundry detergents and will ask all the provinces to adopt it as a form of uniform pollution control, B.C. Resources Minister Ray Williston said Tuesday.

The minister told the Legislature he telephoned federal Resources Minister J. J. Greene in Ottawa Tuesday morning and was told the federal government "was having trouble making a unilateral decision" on the question of controls over the use of phosphates in detergents.

* * *

(An Ottawa report Tuesday quoted Mr. Greene as saying federal authorities are powerless at present to enforce a ban or progressive reduction of phosphates used in detergents.)

But, Mr. Williston said, the federal minister agreed to his proposal that Ottawa draw up "a pilot act for controlling phosphates which can be passed by each legislature so we can have a uniform set of legislation right across Canada."

* * *

"I think that is real progress," Mr. Williston said. "I have asked Mr. Greene to please have it (the draft legislation) back here by March 15 at the latest.

"I am sure the members of this Legislature will give the necessary permission to have first, second and third reading of this proposed legislation on one day if necessary in order to approve it before the current session ends in late March."

* * *

He also told the House that he pleaded with Mr. Greene to take the initiative in drawing up legislation for the control of automobile exhaust fumes which would then be submitted to provincial legislatures for their approval. He was told Ottawa would consult with the provinces on this matter.

* * *

Earlier this week, Pollution Probe, a University of Toronto research group, reported that up to 52.5 per cent phosphate content has been found in heavy duty laundry detergents and up to 45 per cent in automatic dishwasher detergents.

The group, which blames phosphates for much of the

'CLOUDS' ON B.C. HORIZON

B.C. Resources Minister Ray Williston warned in the Legislature Tuesday there are "some clouds on the British Columbia economic horizon" and called upon labor and management in the forest industry to resolve their differences "in a realistic and responsible manner."

Failure by the industry to meet the challenge of declining markets, rising costs, and the threat of labor-management disputes, the minister said, is bound to affect government revenues to a point where it could not afford to provide all the benefits set out in the 1970 budget.

"I want to emphasize that fact," Mr. Williston said. "This is going to be one of the most serious years that we as a province will face . . ."

* * *

"Obvious areas for concern are the market for timber products at prices which allow for profitable operation. At this time our comparative direct forest revenues are on the decline.

"This relates to lumber prices which on average approximate those paid three years ago. Costs are up and prices are down."

Mr. Williston said 70 per cent of B.C.'s foreign markets for lumber are affected by U.S. anti-inflation measures which make housing capital more difficult to raise south of the border. Any decline, he added, would directly affect revenue returns to the government in the form of stumpage.

* * *

Dealing briefly with the labor situation, the minister said pending negotiations promise to be more difficult because of the market situation.

Mr. Williston also warned that the two major crown corporations—B.C. Hydro and the Pacific Great Eastern Railway—would be seriously affected by disruption in the forest industry. Both, he said, are dependent upon continuous activity in the industry to reach budget goals in the coming year.

He noted kraft pulp prices are improving together with the demand for this B.C. product in world markets. But he said it will be another year before the effects of this

White Tide Crushes Skiers

Alpine Avalanche Kills 39

•

Loosened by up to 60-mile-an-hour winds of an Alpine blizzard, the mass of snow jumped a national highway, a river, crushed two garages and ripped the roof off a hotel before crashing through the doors and bay windows of the camp's dining room at breakfast time.

Survivors told of the terrible roar of the avalanche, of its dizzy speed — experts said it may have hit at nearly 120 miles an hour — and of their luck in emerging alive from the white fury.

* * *

The dining room was buried and few of the 30 or so eating there escaped alive. The walls were spattered with the blood from bodies crushed against a wall under the pressure of the slide.

Most of the dead and injured were young people enjoying a low-cost ski vacation at the Union des Centres de Plain Air (Union of Fresh Air Centres). Of the 194 guests, many were French postal and railway workers. There were about 20 Belgians and six West Germans staying at the camp's hostel.

* * *

Some bodies, including those of ski trail workers going to their jobs, were hurled high in the air. The slide's 100-yard-wide front caught cars and carried them 100 yards away.

"There was a gay happy atmosphere at the dining tables," said Jean-Charles Loos, 25, who suffered head and hip injuries. "We were talking about where we would go skiing.

"Suddenly, there was this rumbling sound. As the noise became deafening, I realized it was an avalanche. I just had time to dive against the wall for protection. Then a great wall of snow burst through the door and hit me. I was submerged and I remember no more until I woke up in a neighboring house."

Chantal Demur, 22, said she

Bill Legalizing Abortion Passes Hawaii Senate

HONOLULU (UPI) — The Hawaii senate Tuesday night voted to repeal the state's law outlawing abortions performed by physicians. The landmark bill would make Hawaii the first state in the U.S. to abolish criminal penalties for abortions performed under proper medical conditions. The senate vote was 17-7.

Next stop for the bill is the House of Representatives, where political observers say it has a "fair" chance of passage.

No Body Found

Two Face Murder Charges

LONDON (Reuters) — Two brothers were charged Tuesday night with the murder of Muriel McKay, wife of a British newspaper executive who vanished Dec. 29.

The charges were lodged at the police station in suburban Wimbledon, not far from the home of the 56-year-old Mrs. McKay, whose husband, Alexander, is deputy chairman of The News of The World, a sensationalist Sunday newspaper.

* * *

The charges followed a three-day police search for Mrs. McKay's body at an isolated farm in the countryside north of here. But police said Tuesday no body has been found.

The two accused, who had been questioned for 72 hours, were identified as the residents of the farm, Arthur Hosein, 33, and his brother, Nizamodee, 21. Both are believed natives of Trinidad.

* * *

They were also charged with demanding £1,000,000 ($2,600,000) with threats.

The alleged offences were described as taking place Dec. 29 and Feb. 6.

The accused men will appear in court today.

Mrs. McKay, a tall, green-eyed brunette, was born in Adelaide, Australia. Her husband returned home on the evening of Dec. 29 to find signs of a struggle in the house and his wife gone.

Police Stay Off Job

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — About 150 members of the Newfoundland Constabulary voted late Tuesday to remain off their jobs until 32 suspended constables are reinstated. But one spokesman said if violence breaks out they would return to work.

Deputy assistant chief John Lawlor and an inspector also came to the meeting but met in a separate room with Tom Fraize, chairman of the police constables committee.

New Federal Policy Ends Prison Rule—Indian MLA

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE

The federal government's new Indian policy will mean a release from 103 years of paternal care and prison-like control for Canada's native people, B.C.'s Indian MLA told the B.C. Legislature Tuesday night.

Frank Calder (NDP—Atlin) said the native Indians have for years been condemning Canada's Indian laws and that they "should consider this statement of policy a victory after their many years of protest against a dictatorial administration . . . of those damn Indian agents."

* * *

When provincial jurisdiction of Indian affairs is finally granted, Mr. Calder said, it will mean "a freedom from restraint, from military control, and a freedom from Canada's black holes of iniquities.

* * *

Mr. Calder said he is anxious to see Indians get municipal status and self-government on reserves and he said he hopes for a favorable result in the efforts of Indians at Cape Mudge on Quadra Island to gain municipal status. If they do the next area to seek municipal status may well be Mr. Calder's own Nass River Valley Indians, the Nishgas, he said.

While welcoming the change in Indian affairs Mr. Calder charged the federal government with failure to cope with

Board Will Decide

Complaints of "deplorable" conditions at Oak Bay's Monterey elementary school will be examined by the B.C. education department but Education Minister Donald Brothers could not say Tuesday how long the municipality would have to wait for some kind of an answer.

★ ★ ★

In an interview, Mr. Brothers said he was unfamiliar with the school's problems, but gave his assurance that they would be considered before his department presents classroom needs to the provincial treasury board.

The decision on what schools are deserving will be made by the board, he said.

Asked how long the department report and treasury board approval might take, he said: "How long's a string? I'm doing the best I can."

Oak Bay council voiced anger Monday night about reports of out-dated, unsanitary washroom facilities, an inadequate heating plant and potential fire hazards at the school. It agreed to begin putting pressure on the education department in the hope that funds would be released for construction of a permanent annex.

The annex was approved in a 1966 referendum.

Campbell on Pollution:

Public Must Join Fight

Government action against pollution must be backed by many individual decisions to join the fight, Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell said Tuesday.

"Every day there are a number of housewives making personal decisions about those laundry detergents," the minister told approximately 80 members of the Kiwanis Club of Victoria in the Empress Hotel.

Disposal of non-returnable bottles, litter in parks and roadside garbage were all matters where the individual could help decide the outcome of the anti-pollution fight, he said.

Mr. Campbell also said that forthcoming legislation would eliminate the traditional arrangement allowing a company or municipality to pollute to a certain extent, regardless of the result.

The recent throne speech said that the government would enforce air quality standards announced last year.

Mr. Campbell said that in future, "technological permits" would be issued, keyed to changing circumstances.

"It's going to apply to such things as devices which might become mandatory on autos," he said.

Mr. Campbell recalled that when discussions were held with the city of Nelson concerning its dumping of raw sewage into the Kootenay River, Nelson produced a permit issued in 1919.

"That is taking absurdity to the ultimate goalpost," he said.

However, he added, it was "typical" of the attitude of both municipalities and companies which feel they have the right to pollute on the basis of a permit or precedent.

"The person responsible for pollution at the point of discharge should be absolutely responsible for the cost," Mr. Campbell declared.

He cited New Westminster, which for years has been discharging raw sewage into the Fraser.

He also supported regional government as a means of cleaning up the environment.

"You can't sewer Greater Victoria at all if you take it on a compartmentalized basis," said the minister.

Outer Districts' Reaction

Health Board Cut Merits 'Boycott'

Victoria should be commercially boycotted by all surrounding municipalities if it pulls out its money and staff and wrecks the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health, members of the Sooke school board were told Tuesday.

Trustee Mrs. Isabelle Reader said that the city forgets that it depends to a large degree for its survival on the municipal and electoral areas with which it is surrounded and that it was grossly unfair for it to threaten to wreck the health board and so eliminate health services for schools in the district.

The outburst was precipitated by a report from trustee Ronald Fitton who said he had attended a meeting earlier Tuesday at which the serious situation was discussed. Another such meeting was scheduled for Thursday, he said.

The meeting achieved little, trustee Fitton said.

Mrs. Reader said it was obvious Victoria was trying to force regionalization of the health services in the district and that she was in sympathy with the aim but the city was going about it in the wrong way.

"We resent having our children being used as a threat in this issue," Mrs. Reader said.

The regionalization concept was unanimously endorsed at a Feb. 4 meeting which was attended by representatives of all district municipalities and electoral areas who met with capital region MLAs.

At that time it was pointed out that the health board was maintained mostly by Victoria, Oak Bay and Esquimalt which each paid a per capita levy of approximately $2.50 or more for its maintenance while Saanich and electoral areas were charged 30 cents a head.

This was true, said Mrs. Reader Tuesday, but it was forgotten that the municipalities are receiving a provincial per capita grant of $30 while the electoral areas receive nothing.

Evidence of the fact that Victoria was leaning on the outlying areas for its very existence, said Mrs. Reader, was the frantic effort it was making to draw people into its commercial area — to make it the financial and commercial hub of the whole district.

Mr. Fitton said he thought the matter would eventually be resolved over the discussion table, and did not think Sooke district would be left without health services.

Loyalty Vows: No Comment

Msgr. M. T. Typhoid Type

Island Case Found

By DIANE JANOWSKI

Confirmation of a new case of a kind of typhoid on the Tsartlip Indian reserve in Central Saanich — probably contracted through use of an outdoor privy — was blamed by band council Tuesday on lack of awareness of the seriousness of Indian health problems.

The case, which band spokesmen said was confirmed Monday by a provincial health inspector who called the disease a kind of typhoid, occurred in a woman.

The disease is caused by salmonella bacteria.

Chief Philip Paul would not identify the inspector or the sick woman, but said the health inspector had advised him of the situation by telephone and said it was out of his (the inspector's) jurisdiction, but the family should be warned the disease could be passed on. The disease is commonly called salmonella.

Chief Paul said the telephone call was the first indication the band had that there was salmonella on the reserve.

Chief Paul said when he approached Mrs. T. L. Ambrose, provincial public health nurse for the area, she declined to tell him how the disease had been discovered, but said it was probably contracted through the use of an outdoor privy.

Of the 43 homes on the Tsartlip reserve, only seven have indoor plumbing. There are about 270 residents on the reserve.

Chief Paul said Mrs. Ambrose told him the disease could be a serious threat to the reserve community and said there had been similar cases in two or three other reserve families since September.

Chief Paul said, "We don't know how many cases of this nature could have arisen in the past on the Saanich peninsula because our doctor has been reluctant to release this sort of information.

Mrs. Ambrose told the chief the disease, which induces diarrhea and weakens the victim, can be passed along through cooking utensils.

Chief Paul said she told him that persons suffering from the disease must be under a doctor's care and indicated it could become serious enough to require hospitalization. The reserve victim is not in hospital.

Chief Paul said he has asked the provincial health inspector to check the water supply of the community as well as that of the reserve school.

Secrecy Major Decision For Drugs Counsellors

By PAT MURPHY

Just what policy does a teacher follow when he talks with a student who is taking drugs?

This is a question which will soon be faced by the members of the Greater Victoria school board and, as a guideline, members will consider a statement briefly introduced but not studied Monday at a meeting of the board's education committee—a committee which includes all of the trustees.

The statement was prepared by the Narcotics Addiction Foundation of British Columbia. Copies were distributed among board members so they could study it and think about it at their leisure. It was presented by the board's special education services director E. G. Callbeck.

Mr. Callbeck said the document at that point was not for general consumption, and he cautioned that it should probably be held for discussion by the school board before being dealt with in the press.

However, copies of the document were circulated to reporters, and no prohibition was placed on its use by the education committee.

The document is couched in general terms and may need interpretation before board members can pin down specific topics for discussion.

In a preamble it points out there was no specific or overall policy "concerning the course of action to be taken when a student was involved in a drug dependency situation during the period he is under the jurisdiction of the school authorities."

It was important, the guide continues, that the board should have a policy and that it should have liaison with the Children's Aid Society, law enforcement authorities and treatment clinics.

School staffs should know about referral procedures and in addition, students themselves should have some knowledge of the "ground rules," the guides suggests.

There were a number of factors involved, including responsibility to the school where other students could be affected, to the parents who should know what was going on and to law enforcement agencies where illegal activity, and especially trafficking, was taking place on school property.

There were various opinions, the guide points out, on "confidentiality" in school counselling.

The counsellor should not promise secrecy until he had decided on a course of action. If he did he might be hamstrung when it came to finding a solution. Secrecy could not always be maintained, and a desire to maintain it could work to the disadvantage of the student, school or parents.

In some instances, the guide points out, the counsellor might find that the drug user was reluctant to admit that he had a problem or that the use of drugs was a byproduct of some deeper problem.

A negative or moralistic attitude on the part of the interviewer might be met by an equally negative attitude on the part of the student, the guide observes, and little could be accomplished.

Admitting that many of the observations were nebulous and unsubstantiated, the guide points out that a serious attempt should be made to glean as much information as possible on drugs and their use in a detached way.

"Drug use is not an isolated occurrence and is often associated with disillusionment, perception of hypocrisy, rejection of adult norms and behaviour," the guide said.

Initials Gather

CAPITAL Idea

The POETs are doing their thing, and the COSYs, SPOTs and even the OBYCs are invited.

That reads like a gathering of bureaucrats or a convention of soupmakers, but it is actually the way the POETs (Police Organization of Esquimalt Teens) Tuesday announced an annual swim and dance.

The event is in the Crystal Garden from 8 p.m. to midnight Friday, with music by the Peace Jeep and admission at the door—and the invitation was to members of Victoria's City Organization Supporting Youth (COSY), the Saanich Police Organization of Teens (SPOT) and the Oak Bay Youth Council (OBYC).

Spokesmen for the year-old Esquimalt organization added that any teenagers in Greater Victoria are welcome, whether they belong to an initialled organization or just have initials all their own.

Dockers Seal Ballot Boxes For Single Contract Count

Longshoremen in Victoria, Chemainus and Port Albernia are among 3,200 who vote on a fourth contract settlement proposal in six British Columbia ports today and Thursday and union officials are taking no chances that leaks will occur.

Ballot boxes will remain sealed, no matter how quickly the vote is taken in any area, until the 8 p.m. PST deadline Thursday, when counting will begin.

In three previous votes, results from some areas were made public while members of other locals were voting. Union officials said this could have influenced voting.

Longshoremen turned the last offer down by a vote of 51 per cent a week ago. The latest proposal was worked out during the weekend under threat of federal intervention.

Dockers in Chemainus, Victoria and Port Alberni met Tuesday to discuss latest terms and Vancouver and New Westminsters members meet today.

The current offer remains at a $1.15 hourly increase over three years on a base rate of $3.88, but changes in work rule and work guarantee provisions have been made. Exact terms have not been released.

Mundy Best Toastmaster

Keith Mundy, 131 South Turner, one of five competing speakers, took top honors in the Victoria Beaver Toastmasters club 15th annual speech contest held at the Chinese Village restaurant this week.

Mr. Mundy will represent Beaver toastmasters in the area speakoff to be held in Victoria March 31.

City Doctor Honored

Dr. Donald A. Gaudin, 1175 Cook, has been inducted as a Fellow of the American Academy of Orthopaedic Surgeons. Dr. Gaudin was one of 506 Fellows inducted at the academy's 37th annual meeting in Chicago recently. The academy is the largest medical organization for specialists in bone and joint surgery.

Department Spokesman Cites Differing Views

Indian Meeting's Problems 'Misunderstandings'

An Indian Affairs department public relations officer said Tuesday that most of the problems that have arisen at the regional band managers' conference being held in Victoria are probably due to "misunderstandings."

"I'm certainly not calling them (band managers) liars," said Bob Williams in a telephone interview from Vancouver. "They may not be misleading you; they may be speaking from a different point of view."

Mr. Williams said he considered some charges made last week by delegates to the conference to be erroneous.

★ ★ ★

Speaking of the charge that a resource person who had been expected from Ottawa for the first day's meeting did not appear, he said, "I think the one you're referring to is John Nichols.

Asked whether or not these persons usually advised those who had invited them that they would not be appearing, Mr. Williams said, "I would presume so."

He said he knew nothing about a charge by delegates that the speaker not only failed to appear, but did not advise them of his intention until a letter was received two days after he had been expected.

Speaking of another charge that delegates had been promised they would be paid for travelling time, but had not been, Mr. Williams said, "I was told yesterday (Monday) that Mr. Stelkia had been paid for his travelling time."

★ ★ ★

Chief Jim Stelkia of Oliver, near Penticton, had been mentioned in this respect in a Saturday morning news story, although several of the delegates had complained of the same problem.

Mr. Williams said he had not questioned whether or not anyone else had been paid for the travelling time.

Tom Sampson, band manager for the Tsartlip reserve near Victoria and one of the conference's organizers, said he had been advised Tuesday that Chief Stelkia would be receiving the travelling time allotment Wednesday.

"You can't blame him (Williams) for wanting to cover up for the department," he said.

Another complaint voiced by the delegates had been that information prepared by the Indian organizers had not been distributed by the department, as it was to have been.

"I'm just saying that those pieces of information supposedly prepared by them to be sent out by the department were not known at the department," said Mr. Williams.

He said responsibility for distributing the information lay with the Institute of Adult Studies, where the conference is being held by representatives of 41 of the more than 188 Indian bands in B.C. and the Yukon.

J. O. Boyd, of the institute, who had been involved in the preparatory work for the conference, said: "I have no idea what they (band managers and Indian Affairs department) are referring too. I think you'd have to get us all together at one time to find out what it is."

Mr. Williams said it was difficult to reply to the delegates' charge that they were not being given definite replies to questions because the department is in a state of flux while the white paper is being implemented.

"That is a subjective thing," he said, "and I guess a lot of questions asked would be difficult to answer because there are a lot of changes being made."

He said the delegates had not followed the agenda prepared for the conference.
